'Tories' Afraid Of Democracy, Roosevelt Says

Text of Address—Page 21.

By the Associated Press.

Manteo, Roanoke Island, N. C., Aug. 18.—President Roosevelt accused his foes today of "mouthing" praise of the Constitution while secretly distrusting democracy.

The President's denunciation of what he called his "Tory" opposition was his first since the United States Senate buried his proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court.

It was delivered before a perspiring crowd of several thousand at ceremonies celebrating the 350th anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, first child of English parents born on this continent.

Mr. Roosevelt turned to Lord Macauley, an English historian, who predicted in 1857 that democracy would not succeed in this country, for the major theme of his address.

Assails "Macauleys."

After reading from Macauley's prediction, he declared:

"Almost, methinks, I am reading not from Macauley but from a resolution of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Liberty League, the National Association of Manufacturers or the editorials written at the behest of some well-known newspaper proprietors."

"American Lord Macaulays" of today, the President declared, distrust majority rule because "an enlightened majority will not tolerate the abuses which a privileged minority would seek to foist upon the people as a whole."

Reaffirming his faith in Democratic institutions, the Chief Executive asserted:

"I seek no change in the form of American Government. Majority rule must be preserved as the safeguard of both liberty and civilization."

Opponents on Platform.

He stood on a pine-board, flag-hung platform in a hot inclosure of reconstructed Fort Raleigh, where Sir Walter Raleigh's famous "Lost Colony" was established in 1587.

Postmaster General Farley, Gov. Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina, and other notables were on the platform.

Representative Warren (Democrat), North Carolina, preceding the President, read a cablegram from Sir Anthoney Eden, British foreign minister, saying:

"It is on occasions such as this that we appreciate more keenly than ever the ties of friendship that exist between the English-speaking countries of the world."

"Macaulay condemned the American scheme of Government based on popular majority," the President said. "In this country 80 years later his successors do not dare openly to condemn the American form of Government by popular majority, for they profess adherence to the form, while, at the same time, their every act shows their opposition to the very fundamentals of democracy."

Obliging Bandit Robs Detroit Bridal Party

Chicago, Aug. 19 (U.P.).—A gentlemanly bandit robbed a Detroit wedding party of $54 and their car today, but telephoned police where he abandoned the machine, so the group would not be inconvenienced.

The victims were Robert Breitenbecker, 28, a policeman; his bride of a week, Helen, 19; Conrad Wrist, 24, and Jean McLean, 20, all of Detroit. The bandit gave them back $1 when he stranded them in a suburb.

Fight to Unseat Black Opened By Ex-U.S. Aide

Levitt Attacks Legality in Show-Cause Brief to Supreme Court.

In an unprecedented attack to prevent the Supreme Court seating of Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, Albert Levitt, former special assistant attorney general, yesterday asked the Supreme Court to make Black "show cause" why he should be permitted to serve.

Installation of Black, whose appointment was overwhelmingly confirmed by the Senate Tuesday, "will interfere with and prevent the due, proper and lawful administration of justice in the Supreme Court of the United States," Levitt contended.

Disparaging the effort, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said Black will become a Supreme Court Justice as soon as he takes his oath, and no court action can prevent him taking his seat.

Legal Angle Raised.

Levitt, formerly active in Connecticut Republican politics, has held several Administration offices since he broke with his party and helped to defeat United States Senator Hiram Bingham, it was said. In 1933, he became special assistant to Cummings, and in 1935 was made judge of the Virgin Islands. Since September 30, he has been Special Assistant Attorney General, but recently resigned after differences with Cummings. Holding law degrees from Yale and Harvard, he has been lecturer in philosophy and professor of law at several universities.

In asking Supreme Court permission to file his petition, Levitt raised the same legal questions of Black's constitutional eligibility used to no avail against the Alabaman in the Senate.

He stressed two points:

That Justice Willis Van Devanter's present retired status leaves no vacancy to be filled on the court.

That emolument of Supreme Court office was increased by the Sumners-McCarran court retirement bill, and Black as a member of the Senate was ineligible for appointment.

Sound Proposition.

Heat at High of 93; 4 Felled; Rain Due, But Without Relief

Four heat prostrations were recorded yesterday to Washington's broiling sun that sent the temperature soaring to a high of 93 at 2:20 p. m. from a low of 74 in the early morning.

Stricken in front of his home at 1800 Benning road northeast, John Philips, 38, colored, was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Noble Garner, colored, 58, 1300 Twenty-seventh street northwest, was overcome by heat at Thirty-seventh and O streets northwest and taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Decks Cleared For Saturday Adjournment

Senate Nearly Finished, House Hurries Its Remaining Tasks.

By Robert C. Albright.

Without advertising the event, Congress yesterday was winding up one of its longest sessions since war and depression days, preparatory to a hop, skip and jump down the adjournment plank by Saturday of this week.

With a tax-loophole plugging bill pushed to the brink of passage, and controversial measures sidetracked, the Senate was nearly ready for the plunge. The House milled confidently through a heavier load.

Vice President Garner was again at the gavel as the Senate, in 15 minutes, rushed through tax bill amendments so quickly that confusion developed over changes approved.

Final Passage Today.

A demand that amendments be explained from Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, and an objection to haste by Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, Democratic "Young Turk" leader, delayed final passage until today.

Nevertheless, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley predicted Congress can wind up its business by Saturday, and Speaker Bankhead, on the other side of the Capitol, echoed that optimism. Some there were who whispered "Friday," but Barkley nipped this in the bud. "We can't do it," he said.

To keep pace with the Senate, the House swung into night session on the modified housing bill, but leaders forecast all "desirable" measures would be in last conference stages in time for week-end disposition.

Arizona's Mystery 'Sky Island' Goal of Scientific Explorers

A strip of land that borders on the illusory, a land wilder than a never-never country, is soon to be visited by American scientists. And for the first time, human feet will walk the mysterious "island in the skies" that, curiously enough, is in the United States, within a few miles of where thousands gaze each year upon the Grand Canyon.

This place is the great Shiva Temple in the Grand Canyon National Park, Ariz. It is a mile long, a mile wide, 7,000 feet above sea level and has completely escaped the eyes of American scientists.

Many such plateaus have been carved by the mighty Colorado River in the course of millions of years. Shiva Temple, particularly, stands like a great granite abutment, with sheer walls that have discouraged climbers. What exists on its flat top, besides the heavy forests that can be seen from the distance, is the mystery the scientists hope to uncover.

The exploration will be conducted by the American Museum of Natural History. Two parties will function, one a mountain-climbing group headed by Walter A. Wood, jr., of the American Geographical Society, and the other a working party directed by H. E. Anthony, curator of the Department of Mammalogy of the American Museum.

Smiling Chinese Defy Death As Bombs Tear Homes to Bits

By H. R. Ekins.

United Press War Correspondent.

Tazang, Shanghai Suburbs, Aug. 18.—I came out today to where the bombs were dropping and the soldiers were picking up pieces of their comrades.

The bombs were falling, and men were dying, and the maimed were being carted away in trucks. The trucks came back with fresh, whole men, smilingly going to defend their country and to wind up as so much more bomb fodder.

Out here where the Japanese have been bombing, the soldiers pick up an arm here, a leg there, a head that has rolled in the dust—eyes unclosed and staring.

If there are people who still can visualize war as a pretty thing, a high adventure with bands and flags and natty uniforms, they ought to know what I saw out here on this lush Yangtse River delta where the bombs are dropping.

Out here, I established one doubtful point of the battle—the Japanese up to the afternoon had not landed any regulars, army men, in the delta to attack Shanghai from the rear.

I huddled under the trees with boys of the Chinese army, hoping with them the Japanese bombs would not hit us. The boys were angry about the war. They said it was unfair. They said they were all set to fight ground forces, but that they were helpless against the rain of death from the sky.

I stopped beside an improvised ambulance. Normally it is a beer truck. I talked with one lad whose body was folded up like a jack-

House Passes Much-Revised Housing Bill

By Sidney Olson.

The half-billion-dollar housing bill passed the House, 274 to 86, last night after ten and one-half hours of continuous and furious debate.

The bill, last major measure on the House calendar, was drastically different from the Wagner bill which passed the Senate August 6. Observers predicted a bitter conference tussle over the huge gaps between the two bills.

Surprisingly, the lustiest battle throughout debate on the measure was over the Civil Service provisions which were clipped from the measure. Many Democrats joined Republicans in charges the majority of Democrats were "knifing the President" by slashing civil service requirements from every major bill presented this session."

Amendments Ruled Out.

An attempt by Representative Frank Hancock (Democrat), of North Carolina, who fought many of the provisions of the House bill, to insert a series of Administration-sponsored amendments to the national housing act, collapsed suddenly when Representative Jere Cooper Democrat), Tennessee, who was presiding, ruled these amendments were not germane.

Cooper said these amendments, which would attempt to facilitate private financing of multifamily

By Russell Smith

If "Mrs. Governor" Dixie Bibb Graves doesn't became the next Senator from Alabama a first-rate triumphal procession yesterday was wasted.

From virtually every informed source here and in Alabama came predictions her husband, Gov. David Bibb Graves, will appoint her to the Senate to succeed Hugo L. Black when the latter assumes his associate Supreme Court justiceship.

From the gubernatorial couple themselves, however, came nothing on the subject when they concluded the triumphal procession which began at Montgomery, with a special stop by an American Airlines plane, continued through Atlanta and wound up when they stepped from the liner at the airport here at 8:50 p. m.

300 Meet Plane.

Mrs. Graves was eloquent but unrevealing, and so was the Governor. Clad in a blue traveling dress with a red flower at her left shoulder, she was unruffled, obviously happy, in the midst of a mob of 300 vocal Alabamans, members of Congress, reporters, photographers, plain onlookers, and six children, who had been brought down to shake hands with the Governor.

Lisbon Breaks Relations With Czechoslovakia

Refusal of Latter to Sell Arms Is Given as Official Reason.

By the Associated Press.

Lisbon, Aug. 19 (Thursday).—The Portuguese government has severed diplomatic relations with Czechoslovakia, a Lisbon dispatch said today.

The break came because the Praha government refused to let Portugal buy arms, and because of the Czechoslovakian attitude toward Spanish non-intervention, an official Portuguese communique said.

Czechoslovakia's refusal to permit Portugal, the peninsular neighbor of Spain, to buy war materials was due, the communique asserted, "to third party influences and pressure exerted by those interested in delaying Portugal's rearmament."

John Roosevelt Denies Hurling Wine, Posies at Cannes Mayor

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 18.—John Roosevelt, youngest son of President Roosevelt, denied today he had squirted champagne in the face of the Mayor of Cannes or slapped him with a bouquet of flowers at the Cannes "Battle of Flowers" festival Sunday.

He said the playful celebrant must have been some one else.

Mayor Pierre Nouveau himself, who had a telephone conversation today with American Ambassador William C. Bullitt, asserted:

"I was told that my attacker was young Roosevelt although I had never seen him before. I regret to say that I am certain now it was Mr. Roosevelt. I wish the whole affair were ended."

[The French government acted to suppress further publicity of the incident, the United Press reported. The Quai d'Orsay telephoned the mayor and told him to refuse any further statement.—Editor's Note.]

In Paris the President's son said:

"The first inkling I had of the whole situation was when a London newspaper called me here early today. I have no idea how the situation came up.

"I never met the Mayor of Candes. There were no speeches. I don't know anything about it.

"If that did happen it could be nothing else but a case of mistaken identity. It certainly must have been somebody else."

Japanese Fleet's Furious Gunfire Rocks Shanghai

Special Dispatch to The Post. Copyright, 1937.

Shanghai (Thursday), Aug. 19.—Reports reaching here from Hongkong today said that port had been closed to the mainland as result of an epidemic believed to be the dread Asiatic cholera, plague of the Middle Ages.

Similar outbreaks occurred in Straits Settlements and in the Dutch East Indies, the reports added.

Action closing the port had been taken, it was believed, to prevent the thousands of war refugees fleeing Shanghai and the north from entering the British-controlled island and Victoria, Hongkong, with 800,000 residents, is 900 miles from here.

The number of plague sufferers could not be determined. Some reports said, however, the number was in the thousands. Action had been taken, it was believed, to prevent shipping stopping at any city in the affected regions.

Americans Warned Away.

British officials, it was said, were making desperate efforts to localize the epidemic. Attempts to obtain statements resulted in most reticent replies.

(There had been no official report of Asiatic cholera by Washington sources last night. However, there had been a State Department announcement to the effect the American consul at Hongkong had asked other consuls in southern China to dissuade American fleeing war areas from going toward Hongkong because of the great influx of British refugees and disease epidemic in the British port. The disease was called dysentery in some news dispatches. Attention was called to disruption of sewage and water facilities in Shanghai and other war-torn cities.)

The intensity of the Hongkong outbreak was said in the reports reaching here to be as severe as the Indian epidemic of 1817, which reached Europe by way of Persia and Russia in 1830.

Travels by 2 Routes.

Cholera is endemic in the Orient, from Bombay to southern China, but its chief home is British India. The micro-organism is carried chiefly by infected persons moving from place to place, but soiled clothes, rags and other articles that have come into contact with persons suffering from the disease may be the means of conveyance to a distance.

Historically the dread plague has spread westward by two routes: (1) By sea to the shores of the Red Sea, Egypt and the Mediterranean, and (2) by land to northern India and Afghanistan, thence to Persia and Central Asia, and so to Russia.

The epidemic of 1892 reverted to the overland route and traveled with startling rapidity. Within less than five months it traveled from the northwest provinces of India to what is now known as Leningrad, and thence in a few days to England.

Japanese Retreat.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Aug. 19.—China's picked legions, in seemingly inexhaustible numbers, swept over the mud flats of the Yangtse delta today in the face of the heaviest shelling of the 6-day-old Shanghai war, pushing the Japanese back toward the Whangpoo River.

Japanese fliers took to the air and guns of the third battle fleet roared with increasing thunder, but nothing seemed able to stem the frenzied drive of veteran central army fighters, struggling to smash the Japanese move to rush reinforcements up the river.

Across the Whangpoo flames crackled from burning Pootung and dense black smoke billowed up, obscuring land targets from Japanese bombers.

China was making a desperate move to hurl the Japanese back before the mechanized Nipponese home army moves up the delta with vastly superior fighting equipment in its projected plan to "annihilate the Chinese."

Sunk Boats Block River.

The Japanese fleet began firing shortly after daybreak. The Chinese yesterday sank five Japanese river boats to block off the upper part of the Whangpoo.

Two Japanese gunboats, anchored off the Bund, did not participate in the firing, apparently being moored there to prevent a repetition of the boat-sinking maneuver by which the Chinese have sought to pen up the Japanese warships.

Japanese scouting planes roared from the decks of warships near the Japanese consulate wharf and flew down the river bank, apparently exploring new Chinese positions.

Chinese antiaircraft batteries, set up in the Pootung area, flamed into the dawn. There were no Chinese planes in the air, the offensive being confined to land movement and shelling from big trench mortars.

Japanese troops fought with their backs to the river and to the International Settlement, encircled by a Chinese army that apparently outnumbered them three and four to one. The Japanese military command has indicated that not until

President Signs Bill to Increase D. C. Taxes $9,000,000

Auto Licenses And Property Levies Raised

By James D. Secrest.

A month and a half late, the $9,000,000 District tax bill became a law yesterday upon receiving the reluctant signature of President Roosevelt.

In signing the bill just a few hours before the expiration of the 10-day period allowed for Presidential consideration, the Chief Executive indignantly denounced the attachment of the Tydings price-maintenance rider to it.

District officials immediately set to work organizing a tax-collecting staff of 62 employes and announced that the semiannual realty tax bills will be available by October 1 instead of September 1, as customarily.

Political Pressure Felt.

New employes, they said, will be taken from eligible lists furnished by the Civil Service Commission despite the political pressure which already is being exerted by members of Congress in behalf of their constituents.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan stated that the Budget Bureau has approved the proposed expenditure of $71,890 in current appropriations for the hiring of necessary personnel. A deficiency appropriation to cover this borrowing from other funds will be asked at the opening of the next session of Congress.

The signing of the omnibus tax bill not only erased a $7,000,000 paper deficit created, when Congress passed the $46,000,000 supply act for the current fiscal year, but it assured 10,000 District employes of regular payment of salaries and wages.

Cash Advance Provided.

The act authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to advance whatever funds the District may need until returns from the October realty tax and other revenue are forthcoming.

Due to the tardiness in enactment of the tax measure the District had been threatened with payless paydays after the end of this month.

Washington taxpayers will feel the first lash of the new taxes in the payment of a business privilege levy of three-fifths of 1 per cent. This is payable in September by all businesses and professional persons with incomes in excess of $2,000.

Licenses must be obtained at the District Building within 60 days at $10 each.

The next installment of the higher taxes will come in October when the realty and personal property levy will be collected at the rate of $1.75 on $100 valuation instead of $1.50 as formerly.

License Tax Goes Up.

The third axe will fall in December when motorists will pay from $5 to $12 for license tags that they formerly got for $1.

Both the insurance tax increase and the estate and inheritance levy will be painless so far as most Washingtonians are concerned.

Of the 62 new employes to be hired, 38 will be full-time annual workers and 24 will be part-time per diem employes. The latter will be used to help the traffic director collect the new motor vehicle weight tax.

Three of the jobs will be of an executive nature. An assistant corporation counsel will be paid $4,600 a year, and Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen will be given two assistants at $3,800.

The Commissioners will have to start drafting regulations to administer the new taxes at once. The chief task in this regard will be the complex business privilege levy.

Politics and People

Roosevelt, His Head Unbowed, Announces Refusal to Make Peace With Conservatives.

By Franklyn Waltman

WHATEVER losses President Roosevelt has sustained, whatever setbacks and defeats he has suffered, he demonstrated in his Roanoke Island speech yesterday that his head is unbowed. The significance of that address can be summarized in one sentence: He refuses to make peace with the conservatives.

WALTMAN.

All those who oppose any of President Roosevelt's half-baked economic and social experiments do not believe in democracy, asserts Mr. Roosevelt. He does. Those who disagree with him ipso facto become tories. They believe in placing supreme power in the hands of a class—they believe in oligarchies, and therefore are little Lord Macaulays.

So the battle goes on. The President has arrayed against him everyone who does not fall in step with him. Where Mr. Roosevelt is bound none knows. What his attitude next year will be is a matter of speculation. But that is unimportant. You must surrender independent thinking and bow the knee to him and whoever he wishes to clothe with power to speak for him—or, off with your head.

* * *

It is, of course, but natural that Mr. Roosevelt should make the speech he did at Roanoke Island. In the first place none can excel Mr. Roosevelt in flaying plutocracy, intrenched wealth, special classes and organized business. It is always a good stock theme for any Roosevelt speech.

Secondly, Mr. Roosevelt, it may be presumed, is anxious at this time to distract the attention of the country from his recent failures on Capitol Hill. He knows the art of distracting attention from disagreeable developments as well as any American political practitioner—although his last two previous speeches along that line proved to be duds, that is, his tax evasion message to Congress and his reiteration that something must be done for the one-third ill-housed, ill-fed, ill-clothed of our population.

But there is reason to believe that in making this speech the President was actuated by purposes beyond these two points. There is evidence to sustain the belief that Mr. Roosevelt desired at this time to serve notice that the battle against those who oppose him, especially those within his own party on Capitol Hill who oppose him, will go on, and without quarter.

It was a word of assurance to those of his loyal followers, such as Maury Maverick and the La Follettes, as well as a warning to his opponents. Thus the day comes closer when there must be a determination of the question as to whether the conservatives will be permitted to remain in the Democratic Party, or whether Mr. Roosevelt shall be its dominant force.

Smiling and genial Jim Farley has talked much of harmony and no reprisals. But can anyone remember a single word of assurance against reprisals coming from the White House? Did Mr. Roosevelt appear at the recent harmony dinner in honor of Senator Alben W. Barkley and tell the Senate Democrats that bygones were bygones and would be forgotten and that we were all one happy party? He did not.

It is rather amusing, however, to witness Mr. Roosevelt beating his breast about being champion of democracy and about his faith in the right of the people to rule so soon after his unsuccessful attempt to pack the Supreme Court.

What about democracy in that instance? Did Mr. Roosevelt in his campaign last year outline to the people his plans for changing the Supreme Court? Did he let the Nation vote on that issue when it marched to the ballot box on election day? Of course, everyone knows he did not. He kept his place a secret until he was safely elected. He did not even take his Congress into his confidence, much less the people, until a month after that body convened.

Was Mr. Roosevelt, in proposing his Supreme Court plan on February 5, frank and candid with the people and their representatives in Congress? Did he tell them then that his purpose was to get a Supreme Court which would be sympathetic to his program? He did not. He undertook to make them believe that congestion in the courts and the infirmity of judges were the reasons for his plan.

If the President had the deep, abiding faith in the operation of democracy which he professes, what is his objection to submitting a constitutional amendment—to be ratified by State constitutional conventions to which the people would elect delegates—which would achieve the ends Mr. Roosevelt had in mind when he proposed his judiciary reorganization scheme?

And if Mr. Roosevelt favors the "pure democracy" against which Macaulay warns—that is the absolute rule of a majority—without check or hindrance—why does not Mr. Roosevelt seek to achieve that end in the democratic way? Why does he not ask Congress to submit to the country a constitutional amendment specifically denying the right of the Supreme Court to declare null and void any act of Congress? That is the democratic way. To seek such ends by subterfuge is the Machiavellian way—and, heaven knows, Machiavelli was no democrat.

National Guard To Hold Parade And Field Day

Athletic Contests Planned at Camp Today; Hazen to Attend in Afternoon.

Judge Advocate, District National Guard.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Aug. 18.—The District's National Guardsmen will take the field in athletic contests and stage a dress parade tomorrow as part of the program of annual regimental field day.

Beginning at 8 a. m. and continuing until noon the field events will include three-legged and equipment races, 100-yard dash, barrel-rolling and multiple relays, 440-yard relay and tug-of-war. In charge of the competitions will be Maj. Arthur L. Smith and Capt. George Harbin. Most of the entries were selected yesterday on field trips.

The guest of honor at the parade will be Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who will be accompanied to the camp by Assistant Engineer Commissioner Patrick Henry Tansey. The Regular Army also will send representatives to the parade, which will be held in the late afternoon.

The 121st Engineers, headed by Col. John W. Oehmann, returned to their tents in this camp tonight from Euclid, near here, where they spent two days and last night in the field. Field engineering projects occupied them this morning.

According to schedule, the 104th Quartermaster Regiment and the special troops will be back in camp early tomorrow in time for the field day program.

Lou Gevinson, Washington fighter, will box in an exhibition Friday night instead of tomorrow night, it was stated by the camp athletic officer, Capt. C. E. Smithson. He has been matched against Humphrey Decola, of Washington. Other bouts also will be staged.

Encamped at Winchester.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 18.—Under the command of Maj. F. F. Bernsdof, 90 members of Companies A and B of the First Battalion, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, District of Columbia National Guard, are encamped at Rouss Park here while they conduct a study of Civil War battlefields. The unit will break camp tomorrow and proceed to Cumberland to spend a day.

2 Brothers Die in Fire, Third Saves Parents

Erie, Pa., Aug. 18 (AP).—Two boys trapped in a closet burned to death early today in a fire that swept their home in suburban Wesleyville. They were Richard Dudley, 15, and his 12-year-old brother, Edward, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Dudley. An older brother, Louis, leaped from a second-story window, obtained a ladder and rescued his father and mother from a bedroom.

THE LION OF IDAHO, Senator Borah, in one of his increasingly infrequent Senate speeches, yesterday challenged President Roosevelt to use his "tremendous power" in "the greatest crusade since the American Revolution," a campaign to destroy monopolies.

Borah told the Senate social legislation, such as housing and wage-and-hour bills, would be "largely fruitless" in alleviating economic ills unless monopolies were destroyed. Monopoly, he contended, is "an evil which cannot be controlled—it can only be destroyed."

Private interests, he charged, have the power of fixing prices on "everything that goes into the stomach or onto the backs of the people of the United States."

But he declared monopoly will not be abolished "so long as trusts contribute to the funds of both parties."

SENATOR BYRNES, of South Carolina, revised his legislative proposal for carrying out the Administration's plan for cotton loans.

He introduced a substitute for the proposal he offered Monday. He said it had the approval of Administration officials.

Instead of giving the farmers who co-operate with next year's crop program the difference between 12 cents and the average price of cotton between August 1 and January 1, it would give them the difference between 12 cents and the average price on the day they sell their cotton.

SOCIAL SECURITY for aged Representatives and Senators was proposed by Senator Moore, of New Jersey.

He introduced a bill to give the legislators half-pay retirement upon completing 20 years of service and attaining the age of 65.

Moore explained he would not be eligible because he does not plan to run again for the Senate. He is a candidate for Governor of New Jersey.

THIS SESSION OF Congress—one of the longest in recent years—will cost about $12,000,000, or $50,000 a day.

Clerks made this estimate on the basis of an eight-month session. They explained, however, that the actual cost of operating the legislative department for the entire year will be about $18,000,000.

The biggest item is that of salaries for members, secretaries, clerks, law-drafting experts, police, doorkeepers, janitors, pages and other personnel used in the lawmaking process. It totals $10,900,000 for the 12 months.

THE HOUSE MILITARY committee made public a War Department letter opposing a bill to make Lincoln Ellsworth, Arctic explorer, a lieutenant colonel in the Officers Reserve Corps.

Ellsworth, 57, was commander and navigator of the Amundsen-Ellsworth polar flying expedition. He applied for a reserve officers' commission last February, the department said, but was turned down. Representative Sutphin, of New Jersey, asked Congress to make the appointment.

THE SENATE FOREIGN relations committee failed to act, at its final scheduled session, on Secretary Hull's request for legislation to permit the lease of decommissioned destroyers to Brazil.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, predicted action was unlikely before next session, but said he was confident objections to the proposal from Argentina and elsewhere eventually would be withdrawn.

"The delay will permit the State Department to confer with representatives of the Latin American government and will give the opportunity for them to confer among themselves," Pittman said.

MRS. HATTIE CARAWAY, of Arkansas, the Senate's only woman member, disclosed she has no desire to become one of that body's "long-winded debaters."

She spoke on a legislative subject this week for the first time since she took her seat in 1931. She explained, however, the address was no forerunner of frequent orations.

"You don't like to get up and scream above the bedlam," she said, "although if I feel I have a contribution that will add weight to a discussion, I will make it."

Hoover Opposes Fusionist Party

By the United Press.

Former President Herbert Hoover yesterday rejected three much-discussed proposals to unite all foes of the New Deal into a strong political organization for the 1940 elections battle and called instead for a revitalized Republican Party pledged to a "new and flaming declaration of the rights and responsibilities of free men."

Writing in the current Atlantic Monthly, Mr. Hoover analyzed the hopes that lie behind the three proposals—to create a new party, to change the name of the Republican Party and to bring about a coalition of Republicans, and Jeffersonian Democrats—and then warned of their futility.

He said Republican leaders in more than a score of States feel that the party should hold a convention next year and bring forth a program of "constructive national principles."

Harvard's Lowell Loses License to Drive Auto

Boston, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—President Emeritus A. Lawrence Lowell, 80, of Harvard University was ruled off the road today following investigation of two automobile accidents in one of which he suffered nose and wrist fractures.

Lowell's license was suspended by Motor Vehicle Registrar Frank A. Goodwin, who said the veteran educator had accepted responsibility in both accidents.

G-Men Follow Up Rumors of Nazi Bases in America

By the Associated Press.

G-Men began to scrutinize certain German-American camps yesterday to discover whether any are being operated in violation of Federal law.

"It is really more of a check-up than a formal investigation," Attorney General Cummings told reporters, "but I have asked the Bureau of Investigation to make a cursory examination to ascertain if there are any facts warranting further investigation."

The Government's attention was brought to the camps several weeks ago by Representative Citron (Democrat), Connecticut. He asked the State Department to ascertain whether "Nazi military training camps" are being sponsored in this country by German consulates.

Reds Shoot Six Spies Who Poisoned Soldiers

Moscow, Aug. 18 (AP).—Six "Trotskyist spies," convicted of poisoning Red army soldiers in White Russia "under orders of the Fascist intelligence service," were reported shot today by the Minsk newspaper Worker. All pleaded guilty at a trial before a military court last Sunday.

Col. McChord, Chief of Army Air Operations, Dies With Aide in Flaming Plane

Ditch Wrecks Blazing Craft As It Alights

One Thrown in Air Comes Down in Furnace on the Ground.

Col. William C. McChord, chief of the operations division, Army Air Corps, and Staff Sergt. Michael J. O'Connell, attached to the Second Staff Squadron, Bolling Field, were killed yesterday when their two-seated attack plane crashed and burned in a pasture near Goochland, Va.

En route from Bolling Field to Atlanta, Ga., the plane apparently developed motor trouble and crashed when the pilot attempted to make a forced landing.

Both were burned and it was several hours before identifications were established. The crash took place on grounds of the Virginia Boys' Industrial School, 28 miles west of Richmond.

Gordon Rudd, acting assistant superintendent of the school, said the low-winged plane crashed to the ground as the pilot tried to avoid a deep ditch in the institution's dairy pasture. Army officials were unable to determine immediately who was at the controls.

Plane Catches Fire.

"The plane burst into flames," said Rudd, "as it struck within 100 yards of the dairy barn, where several boys were at work. There apparently was motor trouble and the pilot cut off his motor and circled about for a good 5 miles, dropping lower as he prepared to land."

Rudd ordered spectators not to touch the charred bodies and notified Langley Field of the crash. One of the airmen, he said, was thrown up and out of his seat and fell into the flaming wreckage on his back. The other was held suspended, head downward. Spectators watched helplessly while the ship burned.

Engine numbers on the plane and a watch belonging to Col. McChord helped to establish the flyers' identity.

"A deep ditch cuts across the pasture," Rudd told investigators, "and apparently the pilot did not see it until it was too late. He tried then to avoid it—tried to wiggle his way over—and the plane lost headway and dived into the ground."

Inquiry Ordered.

A three-man board of inquiry will conduct an investigation at Goochland, the War Department announced last night.

Col. McChord lived here at the Mayflower Hotel. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Florence R. McChord. Sergt. O'Connell is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anna May O'Connell, and a daughter, Patricia. They live on R. F. D. No. 3, Alexandria, Va.

Col. McChord was born in Lebanon, Ky., and has been on duty in Washington periodically since 1918. He was 55. After his graduation from West Point in 1907, Col. McChord was commissioned in the First Cavalry and was sent to Fort Clark, Tex.

He transferred to the Air Service in the World War. He was a graduate of the Mounted Service School, the Air Corps Tactical School, the Command and General Staff School and the Army War College. Col. McChord had been in Washington since 1935.

'Numb All Over,' Entrapped Miner Cries to Rescuers

Placerville, Calif., Aug. 18 (U.P.).—trapped beneath tons of earth and rocks by a cave-in at the gopher-boulder mine, Frank Libby, Fair Oaks miner, talked to his rescuers as they sought to extricate him late today.

"I'm hurt, but I don't feel any pain," Libby gasped. "I'm numb all over."

Another miner, Hardy Achzig, was trapped in the same cave-in and authorities who directed the rescue efforts believed he was dead.

Labor Board Told Of Whisky Bribe

By the Associated Press.

New Cumberland, W. Va., Aug. 18. Red-faced John Stuckey testified today at a labor board hearing the chairman of the Weirton Steel Employe Representation Plan had told him he "could hit" a man on the head and leave him in the woods.

Stuckey and Francis Moore, an employe of the company, said they were offered "whisky and $20" to do "special work" and "go out and get an organizer" of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Both named John Larkin, chairman of the Plant Employe Representation Plan, as the man who sent them on their "trips."

Boy, 12, Wavers As 2 'Mothers' Fight for Him

Parent Says He Smiled as She Recalled His Baby Days With Her.

By the Associated Press.

Elizabeth, N. J., Aug. 18.—A 12-year-old boy, called upon to make a Solomon-like decision, apparently was unresponsive today as mother love resorted to babyhood reminiscences in an effort to overcome Howard Frankel's outspoken preference for his stepmother of the last five years.

The boy and the mother, tiny, nervous Mrs. Rose Frankel of Brooklyn, met for the first time in almost five years in a chancery court-ordered tryst. More reunions have been ordered by Advisory Master Dougal Herr until Howard decides whether he wishes to remain with his father and stepmother or return to his mother.

The mother was confident she had "broken the ice, I'm sure," at today's meeting. But Howard, accompanied to and from the meeting by his stepmother, Mrs. Betty Frankel, gave no indication his feelings had changed.

The father, Julius Frankel, obtained a Reno divorce in 1932 and remarried. The mother says the New York Supreme Court last December gave her complete custody of Howard. Frankel, she alleges, moved to Linden and made it impossible for her to recover her son under the New York order. Bringing suit in New Jersey for maintenance for herself and the boy, along with full custody, she charged the father had "alienated the boy's affections and taught him to hate his real mother.

Telling of today's meeting, Mrs. Frankel said:

"I asked him if he remembered the time we went for a vacation in Vineland, when he used to jump and dive around in the water. He was 6 then. When I showed him pictures of me and him together, he smiled."

Parents Fly to Side Of District Student Hurt in Auto Crash

Robert O'Riley, Georgetown University sophomore, was in a serious condition at Gallup, N. Mex., last night from injuries suffered in an automobile accident which resulted in the death of one of his companions and the injury of another.

With O'Riley were his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Vincent O'Riley, of Scarsdale, N. Y., who flew to his bedside when word of the accident reached them.

Franco Drives 12 Miles Closer To Santander

Claims 1,700 Prisoners; Loyalists Smash Rebels Flank.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 18.—The insurgent radio at Bilbao announced tonight that Gen. Francisco Franco's troops have occupied the town of Arena, 28 miles from Santander.

Arena is 11½ miles north of Reinosa, important northern Spanish town taken earlier in the week by the insurgents in their campaign against government-held Santander.

The radio communique said 1,700 government militiamen surrendered.

The government troops were said to have rushed from their rocky strongholds this morning and swept the insurgents from their trenches along the Palencia highway in a complete rout.

4,000 Men Trapped.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Five loyalist "lost battalions" of 4,000 men without food or water staggered through the scrub brush along the Erbe River tonight, hopelessly trapped behind nationalist lines in Gen. Francisco Franco's swift drive toward Santander. Franco sent a strong column southward from Orzales, 4 miles east of Reinosa.

Walker Brands 'Tin-Box' Charge 'Innuendo Hash'

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Former Mayor James J. Walker, referred to by Samuel Seabury as captain of "The Tin Box Brigade" following Walker's appointment Monday to a $12,000 a year transit commission job, today branded the former State Supreme Court Justice's statement as "political propaganda."

"I never owned a tin box," Walker said and added Seabury's statement was "the same old, warmed-over hash of innuendo, half-truth and misrepresentation of the record."

"The Seabury statements served to befog the truth and in no instance was he ever able to support his statements with credible or corroborated testimony. In no instance did he ever make good with the truth, but his attempt was to poison the public mind with his statements."

U. S. Presses State To Refund 3 Cents

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Government took a firm stand against Tennessee yesterday in a matter of 3 cents. R. N. Elliott, Acting Comptroller General, ruled the Government was entitled to a refund of $3.36 for Tennessee gasoline taxes paid by Veterans Administration employes. Tennessee offered to refund $3.33, explaining the State received only 99 per cent of its 7-cent gasoline tax, with dealers keeping 1 per cent for evaporation.

Dyer Collapses Twice After Day in Court

Los Angeles, Aug. 18 (AP).—Albert Dyer, on trial for murder of three little Inglewood girls, has collapsed twice in the last three days. Police officers guarding him said today that on both occasions Dyer wailed, screeched, broke from the guard in his cell, and was not subdued for several minutes.

They'll Never Swallow Mosquito Spray

Jimmy Whipty, aged 1, left, and his 11-month-old cousin, Joan Kessler, learned yesterday that mosquito spray when taken internally has no effect on the insects. They themselves were the ones that suffered from the dose. Dr. Everett Gordon, of Emergency Hospital, summoned when it was discovered that the children had drunk a bottle of the fluid, found them feeling ill but not in a serious condition. They are shown above playing with the empty bottle at their home, 3500 Alton place northwest.

Pilot Disarms Boy Who Seized Plane, Headed for Mexico

Rosenberg, Tex., Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Robert Hunt, a Houston air school pilot, today overpowered an armed youth who commandeered his plane and forced him to fly here en route to Mexico.

The pilot took advantage of the youth's carelessness and disarmed him while they waited for a farmer to bring gasoline for a resumption of the flight.

The youth said he was Jack D. Hamerly, 19, but refused to tell his home. He said his stepfather had "kicked me out" and that he had lost his job. He said he wanted to go to Mexico and "get away from them all." He was held in jail here.

Blast Kills Six, Scalds Nine on U. S. Destroyer

Va. Official, Md. Enlisted Man Hurt; Live Steam Fills Fire Room.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—A blast of live steam in the fire room of the U. S. Destroyer Cassin killed six workmen today and scalded nine others, including seven enlisted men.

The dead were Joseph Vassaluzzo, Michael Scavo, W. T. McCallum and William Mehl, of Philadelphia; George Dreisbach, of Oaklyn, N. J., and Daniel Vantier, Camden, N. J.

The injured men were Lieut. Henry N. Marshall, of Markheim, Va., engineering officer of the vessel; D. H. Phillips, San Jose, Calif.; T. L. Athey, Hagerstown, Md., and A. L. Kohlstrom, Worcester, Mass., firemen; A. E. Bryan, Johnstown, Pa.; C. L. Minnehan, Watertown, Mass., and John Kolf, Wenonah, N. J., water tenders; Jerome Sullivan, Louis Sherby, of Philadelphia, workmen.

Alliance Indorses 3 Protective Bills

By a Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 18.—Three bills introduced by Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, were indorsed today by the National Alliance of Postal Employes, meeting here at the Catherine Street "Y," following an address by the colored representative.

The measures provided for a commission on industrial and economic development of the colored people in America, would abolish use of the photograph in connection with Civil Service applications and would require personnel officers to certify for civil service appointments the highest ranking eligible on any list furnished by the Civil Service Commission.

Greater efficiency in all forms of Government service was urged by Representative Mitchell, for all colored workers, that they might be in position to demand recognition when merited.

Marines Are Dispatched as Other Powers Strengthen Forces in City.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Although the United States is making every effort possible to evacuate Americans from Shanghai and the other disturbed zones of China, there is no intention on the part of this Government to abandon its interests in the Chinese city.

Indeed, for the present, the American Government will stand shoulder to shoulder with the British and French in protecting its rights and interests within the International Settlement of Shanghai. Any other course, it is held, would mark the United States as quitter and a nation indifferent to its obligations in world affairs.

Thus, there will be no washing of American hands of responsibilities and obligations growing out of the Sino-Japanese conflict. This may be said with authority. At the same time, it may be said this Government has no direct interest in the Sino-Japanese conflict. Its interest is confined to the consequences of that conflict on international rights in Shanghai, a cosmopolitan city which was developed by foreign interests, even though it is under the limited sovereignty of China.

Fear Epidemics.

The American purpose at this time is to protect nationals of this country in Shanghai, and protection from danger is easiest achieved by evacuation. Fear of outbreak of epidemics is another reason for the rapid evacuation which has been going on this week and which will continue for several weeks.

With water mains being broken and sewage systems disrupted, the threat of the spread of disease in China becomes a real one. Already disease has become epidemic in Hongkong. The American consul general at Hongkong yesterday asked American consuls throughout southern China to dissuade fleeing Americans from coming to Hongkong on account of the large influx of British into that city and because of the threat of a serious epidemic.

State Department officials estimated that by tomorrow night 1,700 Americans will have left Shanghai as a result of the evacuation orders. This is more than one-half of the permanent American population of Shanghai, numbering approximately 3,000.

1,000 More to Leave.

The liner President Taft already has left Shanghai with 90 Americans homeward bound. The President McKinley left Shanghai today with approximately 250 Americans aboard, while the President Jefferson will take away abo. 250. The President Hoover, sailing tomorrow, is expected to have aboard between 800 and 900 Americans.

American officials in Shanghai have urged all Americans who can to leave the war-stricken city. Facilities first are being provided for the aged, women and children and then able-bodied men. Only those Americans who are engaged in operating the electric power system, the tramways, waterworks, banks and similar enterprises will remain in Shanghai. Approximately 1,000 Americans will be taken from Shanghai in succeeding weeks.

This Government does not regard the trouble at Shanghai as a temporary incident but is predicating its plans on the anticipation that the present disturbed condition will be serious and prolonged. This anticipation may not materialize, but the American officials take the view it is their duty to take every reasonable precaution for the protection of American nationals and their interests.

The fact this Government expects a prolonged period of trouble at Shanghai was evidenced by the decision to send a regiment of 1,200 Marines from San Diego to Shanghai to reinforce the 1,070 Marines now on duty there. The San Diego Marines will arrive in Shanghai, aboard the Transport Chaumont, in about five weeks.

This would indicate the need for additional Marines in Shanghai is not regarded as urgent—since Army troops could have been rushed in five days from Manila.

House, at Night Session, Passes $500,000,000 Housing Bill

housing projects for low-income groups by extending existing Federal insurance provisions, concerned private housing agencies, while the present bill concerned public housing agencies.

The bill as passed by the House differed from the Senate measure in nearly everything except its reference to housing. Where the Senate authorized the issuance of bonds up to $700,000,000 in the first two years after enactment, the House cut the authorization to $500,000,000.

The Senate provided a three-man board of directors—one member to be an administrator; the House set up a single $10,000-a-year administrator to be advised by nine unpaid geographically picked assistants. The Senate allowed expenditures for research, experimentation and demonstration projects; the House slashed them out completely.

The Senate would have allowed expenditures in any one State of as much as 20 per cent of the total $700,000,000, but the House sheared this to 10 per cent of $500,000,000, ignoring pleas of big-city Representatives.

The Byrd amendment, adopted in the Senate after a fierce struggle, limiting housing project costs to $4,000 per family dwelling-unit or $1,000 per room, was liberalized in the House to allow $5,000 per unit with no limit on the room cost, this to exclude cost of land, slum clearance and extra facilities such as nurseries and playgrounds.

Here again Hancock battled for a change in the measure so extensively rewritten by the House Banking Committee under the leadership of Representative Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), Alabama. The North Carolina member shouted for House consideration of "the effect of building expensive homes for this low-income group on the morale of frugal, self-sacrificing people who have saved all their lives to build themselves a $2,500 home." He was voted down, 97-69. Representative John O'Connor (Democrat), New York, said all city members would vote against this provision as "nullifying" the bill.

Both bills agree on the sum of $26,000,000 for annual Federal contributions, capital grants and administrative expenses for the current fiscal year. The Housing Authority, under the bill, will be a new permanent agency under the Department of the Interior. After aiding in construction of projects, it would contribute annually or make capital grants toward the objective of keeping the projects in the low-rent class for low-income groups. Contributions may not exceed the going Federal rate of interest plus 1 per cent, or 3½ per cent of the project cost, payable in not more than 60 years. Subsidies are granted to take care of the difference between the low rentals and the rent necessary to make the project economic. Where capital grants are made the House bill provides that the local agency must put up a subsidy equal to 25 per cent of the project cost in cash, land, facilities or tax remissions. The Senate bill sets the local contribution at 20 per cent, and requires 5 per cent of that in cash.

Three amendments out of more than a score presented were accepted by the House. One, by Representative Francis Case (Republican), South Dakota, made dwellings available only to United States citizens. Another, by Representative Brent Spence (Democrat), Kentucky, allowed the Housing Authority to defer demolition of slums wherever a housing shortage is "so acute as to force dangerous overcrowding." Another, by Representatives James Wadsworth and Hamilton Fish, both New York Republicans, eliminated monthly reports to the Labor Department from subcontractors.

Doughty little Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, strode to the well of the House after the majority had trampled on the civil service to accuse his colleagues of "putting our party in the hole" by that action. "You deny your own President the right to act in behalf of the merit system," he roared.

In quick succession, Representatives Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, and Claude Fuller, of Arkansas, both Democrats, took the floor to attack the merit system, while Fish, speaking for the cheering Republicans, bellowed mockingly: "Here you are, knifing your own President in the back by this political racket of giving lip-service to the civil service and then cutting it out of every bill that comes up."

The bitterness of this debate carried through until the next to last roll call, when Representative Robert Luce (Republican), Massachusetts, moved to recommit the bill and amend it by inserting a civil service clause. This failed, 222 to 140, and Speaker Bankhead ordered the final roll call at 9:20 p. m.

Thousands Ask Chance to Fight With Chinese

Gen. Hearn Grows Weary Answering Letters From Americans.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 18.—A tired soldier of fortune, Gen. Russell Hearn, laid a handful of letters on a table, called attention to their varied postmarks and said:

"One day's mail. Guys from everywhere want to join me."

Since Hearn let it be known a few weeks ago that he is assembling—not recruiting, positively not—other soldiers of fortune to fight for China, he said he has been deluged with mail.

"I haven't been able to sleep," he complained. "Answering letters all the time.

Gets 12,000 Letters.

"About 12,000 people have written me already, I guess," Hearn said today. "Not only pilots, but cavalrymen and infantrymen and engineers and even some women who want to be nurses. They all want to know when we leave and how we get there.

"I can't tell them anything definite. There's a law which makes it illegal to recruit men in the United States for service as combatants against a nation with which we are friendly.

"Now I don't want to violate the law. I'm even operating on my own funds. I refused to take money to meet my expenses because that would be a technical violation. I'm trying to avoid breaking the law as much as possible."

Sympathies With Chinese.

Hearn, who is 35, says he was in the French Foreign Legion, fought in three Mexican revolutions, fought with the White Russians and commanded a division of Manchurian troops from 1923 until 1928, admits that he was approached by a "high-ranking Chinese officer" with the idea of forming an "international brigade."

Hearn refused to indicate when he will leave to join the Chinese.

Chinese Main Line Mile From River

Shanghai, Aug. 18 (AP).—Chinese commanders asserted today their main line had been pushed forward to within a mile of the Whangpoo River and that the Japanese were losing ground in the Hongkew and Yangtzepoo areas in northeastern Shanghai as well as in Chapei to the north.

Rumors the Chinese intended to push the Japanese back through "French town" in order to strike with another force from the rear were denied by Chinese officers. Shanghai's Mayor O. K. Yui promised the Chinese would not retreat through the settlement. He said he had British assurances such a retreat would not be permitted.

Russians Stage Biggest Air Show

Moscow, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—The Soviet Union staged its fifth annual aviation festival today with the greatest massing of civil and military aircraft since the revolution.

The keynote of the show, held at Tushino Airport outside Moscow and witnessed by Dictator Josef V. Stalin and high government leaders, was the Russian conquest of the Arctic.

All of Russia's Arctic fliers not engaged in the search for Sigismund Levanevsky and his companions exhibited the planes which they will fly over the projected Moscow-to-United States air route.

Holy Land Division Backed by League

By the United Press.

Geneva, Aug. 19.—The League of Nations mandate commission tonight drafted a report blaming "the hostile attitude of the Arabs for failure of the present Palestine mandate and approving, with modifications, the British plan of partition, reliable League reports said.

The report, to be placed before the League Council in September, was understood to place the responsibility for the Jewish-Arab disorders of 1935 and 1936 upon the Arabs, but there was some criticism of the British administration of the mandate.

Jewish circles were enthusiastic over the commission's reported findings.

It was said the mandates commission suggested a fresh "solution" to the Arab-Jewish conflict, but that this actually consisted of a modified version of the British plan.

North China Seeks Antonomous State

Tientsin, China, Aug. 18 (AP).—An underground North China separatist movement, encouraged by Japanese, came into the open here and in Peiping today. It sought separate peace with Japan.

It urged the establishment of an anti-war and anti-Communist administration divorced from the Nanking central government in a "North China for North China" campaign.

Chile Plans Better Navy.

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 18 (AP).—Modernization of the armed forces of Chile, particularly the navy, was proposed today in a bill submitted to the chamber by Edmundo Fuenzalida, a liberal deputy. The project would be financed through a tax on copper.

The Preference Raise.

Good players are careful to distinguish between the "preference raise" and the true raise. The reason for this arises out of the logic of partnership bidding. When a player bids two suits, as a general rule he wants his partner to make a choice between those suits. His partner's choice at the lowest possible level is either to pass the second suit named, or to return to the first suit. Such a return is called a "preference raise," and even this is really a misnomer. It is not a raise at all—it is merely a show of preference.

It follows, therefore, that when a player has a hand with which he is willing to express more than a mere preference he should jump the bidding. This does not necessarily show a good hand but serves to distinguish between a fair hand and a weak one.

South, dealer.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Women Dodge Bombs to Shop, Says Shanghai Housewife

Life at Home Is Enlivened By Air Raids

War Precipitated Rush for Food Stores; Big Sale of Canned Goods.

(Elisabeth Lantry Harris has been more than a silent partner of the A. P.'s bureau chief, Morris J. Harris, during nearly a week of the battle of Shanghai. She rode with the first American evacuating party by tender down the Whangpoo, under fire, and then rode back again. Today the Associated Press asked her to take the folks back home through a domestic day in a wartime international city. Here's the story of a Kansas City girl and what she did while a battle went on around and above her.—Editor's note.)

By Elisabeth Lantry Harris,

(Wife of the Associated Press Chief of Bureau in Shanghai.)

Shanghai (Thursday), Aug. 19.—The war caught me with a market basket on my arm.

That was last Saturday, and since then we have had air bombs, artillery duels, machine-gun battles and infantry assaults.

It's getting worse every day.

Last Saturday I started out, as usual, to do my week-end shopping at a Chinese market. I soon found that bargaining—a great national pastime in China—was useless. Because of the war, the utmost confusion prevailed.

Vegetables, meats and other foodstuffs were plentiful, but prices had doubled overnight. One paid the price asked or the Chinese merchant offered the goods to the next housewife.

It was then I got the idea of laying in a supply of canned goods. That afternoon I went to the largest Chinese department store.

Rush for Canned Goods.

It became apparent immediately that the canned goods idea had occurred to others. The usually well-stocked shelves of the store were all but empty.

Along with scores of other women, I threw away my prepared list and took what I could ge'

As I was leaving the market, there suddenly was a terrific commotion. Somebody called out, "Air raid!"

Heavy iron shutters were pulled quickly over windows and doorways. This was not to protect the store from bombing but to prevent a hysterical inrush of frightened, helpless Chinese humanity, mostly refugees, who were scurrying to safety.

Looking up, we saw the heavens dotted with airplanes, making puffs of black smoke as each bomb dropped.

Anti-aircraft guns began a stuttering fire which made the sky an inferno. But I was more fascinated than frightened, because it was my baptism of fire.

Clerks are Calm.

Strangely, there was no panic among the Chinese clerks and salesmen. One of them continued calmly sweeping the floor.

Having read a lot about air raids in Spain, I had wondered how I would react to one.

Well, now I know. I didn't faint. I didn't become hysterical. Nor did I—as I had hoped to do—become heroic.

That was Saturday, the 14th.

During the last five days it has been a succession of listening to the almost continuous bombing and shelling, rushing from window to window or to the roof to get a view of air raids which occur several times daily, tuning in on hourly radio broadcasts of latest news from the front, and, in between, trying to adjust my household to a new routine of living.

Not receiving our daily bottle of milk was the first break in routine; but as long as the supply of canned milk holds out, that is not much of a problem.

The city gas supply was cut off yesterday as a precaution against fire. Now our entire cooking is done on a funny little clay stove which I borrowed from my Chinese cook.

Watch Bombing Planes.

We use charcoal in this stove and have laid in a reserve supply.

Oh! I just ran to the window to watch six bombing planes pass in formation over our building. A welter of heads, foreign and Chinese, suddenly came out from all windows, expecting a heavy bombardment.

The planes passed beyond. We breathed easier.

To go on with what I was saying . . .

The water supply and electric lights are still all right, but I've put in a supply of bottled water for emergencies, together with plenty of candles, two lanterns and a can of kerosene.

Theaters and movies have closed. Trolley lines and motor buses have stopped running. Gasoline for private cars is being conserved zealously.

The danger of being struck by stray pieces of shrapnel from anti-aircraft while walking or riding in the streets keeps us all close to home.

It may be "undeclared" war, but it's a war to destroy one's nerves and try one's soul.

knife because of a piece of shrapnel which had gone through him.

"Chung kuo wan sui," he said when I spoke to him—"China will live for 10,000 years."

There was no screaming, no emotion, no self-pity in this land where life is cheap and they spend it freely.

The last time I visited Tazang was in 1932 during the Shanghai war of that year. It was bombed then but it was mild stuff compared to this.

What affected me most was the poor civilians trudging the dusty roads, not knowing where to flee—and holding branches of trees over their heads as camouflage. They were leaving their homes, their little fields ready for the harvest that means the difference between life and death to them.

I never heard a wounded man or woman whimper. When a Japanese plane dropped a bomb and the ancestral home of a farmer, a place where generation after generation of his forebears had lived and died, went up in flames; when he and his family went philosophically across the fields with a few salvaged belongings bundled in bags on their shoulders, they muttered only:

"Ai ya!"—"It's bad!"

Along the road there were, actually, tens of thousands of people trying to reach Soochow and other up-river points after having fled Shanghai.

At Chenju, where the great international wireless station is situated, we found the village a human slaughterhouse. Japanese bombs had demolished house upon house, bringing the roofs down like an Alpine avalanche.

We arrived there ten minues after the last bomb in one raid landed. They were carrying out the maimed and wounded, and more soldiers were coming in to sit and await destruction in the pungent, sickening stench of death.

There were at least 40 Japanese planes in the skies, and the bombng never really ceased. As soon as one flight had dropped devastation, there would be another.

It was terrible to see it all, a beautiful countryside being despoiled, lovable people maimed or killed, thousands of children like my own little daughter sent out homeless, alone, hungry and thirsty—to be bombed again.

But the worst thing we saw, was when a Japanese airplane dropped its bombs and then came sweeping down. We saw a group of girls crouch in terror at the roadside, covering their eyes with their arms. There was a powerful burst of machine-gun fire and the bullets ripped through the girls' bodies.

Chinese Endure Heaviest Shelling of War, Drive Foe Back on River; Shanghai Trembles

Friday will they be able to throw the full might of the trained Nipponese home army against the Chinese.

A Japanese transport apparently had run the Whangpoo's gantlet of shellfire and was moored alongside the wharf at the Japanese consulate.

Much of Shanghai was in flames and the roar of exploding artillery and naval shells and aerial bombs rocked the city as the Chinese drove forward on the International Settlement sector of the northern front.

Chinese Mayor O. K. Yui, of the Chinese city, claimed a series of victories.

Japanese admitted they had been forced to retire in two areas.

They said the full effect of their offensive would not be felt until August 20 or 21 when their army divisions move into action on all sectors of the general Shanghai front.

Japanese Supreme in Air.

The Japanese had achieved control of the air, however, and revealed they had 150 planes in action during yesterday's roaring aerial bombardment of the Chinese positions.

British military intelligence reported 16 of the Japanese army transports which arrived earlier in the week off the mouth of the Yangtze River were unloaded yesterday.

In addition to infantry regiments the transports carried artillery, tanks and other equipment.

Two full Japanese army divisions, plus a mixed brigade, were reported to have arrived, and it was believed all the men and equipment would be ashore and in fighting positions by Saturday at the latest.

The French Convent of the Sacred Heart was virtually under siege in a remote district in the International Settlement, as a howling mob of more than 1,000 Chinese refugees surrounded the compound, demanding food.

Twenty-five French nuns, abandoned by male employes, were forced to barricade buildings and carry on the work of caring for 150 patients in the convent hospital.

Food supplies for the patients were threatened, as the clamoring Chinese surged between the kitchen building and the hospital and pounced on nuns carrying trays of food. They tore away the trays and fought among themselves for scraps of food.

The Chinese offensive was the greatest that the Nanking government's German-trained divisions have attempted since the war started as result of the killing of two Japanese navy men the night of August 9 by Chinese soldiers.

In a single concerted rush last night the Chinese occupied the Yangtzepoo district of the International Settlement, cut the Japanese lines and surrounded nearly all the land approaches to the Japanese positions in the Hongkew area of the Settlement, adjoining the Chapei region of the Chinese city.

The position of 10,000 Japanese bluejackets in the whole northern sector was desperate.

At 1:30 a. m. Chinese machine-gun detachments, which had fought their way to the edge of the Whangpoo River in the Pootung sector, boldly attacked the Japanese warships and began spraying their decks with bullets.

Japanese searchlights were brought into play and lighted up the whole waterfront. The warships fired point-blank at the shore with their small batteries.

The Japanese frantically cleared noncombatants from the Yangtsepoo area and at midnight the big guns of their warships in the river began a bombardment.

Chinese said they had put 130,000 men into the attack.

Their divisions in the Pootung area, opposite Yangtsepoo, created a diversion by firing on the Japanese warships, which were forced to shell both banks of the Wangpoo simultaneously.

Several areas in Pootung again were in flames. One huge fire was burning opposite the French concession waterfront near the United States Dollar Line docks.

Earlier Mayor Yui had announced Chinese had driven the Japanese from the vicinity of the American-owned Shanghai Power Co.'s plant in Yangtsepoo and expected to capture the entire Japanese position in Hongkew. The plant is guarded by U. S. blue-jackets.

He promised to protect foreign-owned property south of Soochow Creek, in the Anglo-American area, if the Settlement council would keep all Japanese out of these districts.

Casualties on both sides were heavy and it was estimated the total for the week of heavy fighting, including civilians, was more than 7,500 dead and 20,000 wounded.

By the Associated Press.

The Chinese Embassy reported last night the Japanese lost eight planes in four raids on Nanking Tuesday. The Embassy said two were shot down at Kashing, three at Cuyung and three others at Chinkiang and Yangchow.

Russia Silent, Powers Wary In China Crisis

Britain, France, Germany and Italy Agree to 'Hands-Off' Policy.

By the United Press.

Paris, Aug. 18.—European powers agreed tonight, after consultations and exchanges of information, to maintain a "hands-off" policy in the Sino-Japanese conflict and to soft-pedal the crisis at the League of Nation Council meeting in September.

French diplomats said the decision not to interfere in the crisis, either directly or indirectly, obviated any possibility of a protest to the League Council against the invasion of Chinese territory by Japan's armed forces.

The powers, anxious to dodge the Far Eastern complications, prefer to apply to China the same nonintervention formula which thus far has prevented the Spanish civil war from bursting Spain's boundaries.

The attitude of the European nations, as brought into focus by the chancellory consultations, is:

Britain—Reinforcing troops for defense of its nationals in Shanghai and other war zones, but the Cabinet has decided against intervention on an international scale.

France—Has informed Washington it is prepared to support any action which the United States or Britain may decide upon, but otherwise will propose no mediation either directly or through the League.

Russia—The only power which really could effectively intervene on a military basis remains silent.

The Place To Economize.

The abortive effort of the House Appropriations Committee to eliminate from the third deficiency bill an item of $20,000,000 for farm tenant loans and land purchases is interpreted as a setback for advocates of economy. But it is desirable to realize that the damage was really done when Congress insisted upon passing various measures calling for additional outlays for which no provision had been made in the budget.

If Congress intended to object to voting the $20,000,000 which it authorized to be spent under the farm tenant bill, it should obviously not have approved that measure in the first place. The question was debated at great length, however, and finally it was decided to initiate the program of financing tenant purchases of farms on a modest scale. Since the law is now on the statute books, there is no good excuse for a failure of the committee to recommend an appropriation.

The action of the Appropriations Committee in cutting in half the supplementary appropriation for the National Labor Relations Board, as recommended by the Budget Bureau, is equally hard to justify, unless it is assumed that the committee knows more about the needs of the NLRB than the budget authorities.

There was abundant evidence that hostility to the Wagner act rather than desire to economize played a large part in the move to cut down funds in this case. Real economy of course, does not consist in adopting a penurious attitude toward an administrative agency after it has been created. If a job is not to be done properly it should not be undertaken. And that applies with especial force to an agency called upon to deal with industrial disputes.

Very little is gained by Congress when it tries to economize at the wrong end. It votes heedlessly or recklessly to extend the activities of the Federal Government and then tries futilely to cut expenditures by handicapping its own creations. Of course, such attempts constitute economy "gestures" which may temporarily deceive the public. But later on there will be more deficiency bills.

The way to achieve constructive economies is to survey the entire spending program with a view to dropping nonessential activities and effecting other economies in ways least likely to impair essential functions of government. And the necessity for such comprehensive retrenchment is strongly demonstrated by the rapidly mounting scale of Federal expenditures during the present fiscal year.

From the end of June to the middle of August, total expenditures carried on the Treasury statement amounted to over $970,000,000. Exact comparisons with previous years are made difficult because of the practice of deducting net receipts of various revolving funds from current outlays. But with appropriate adjustments made, current expenditures still appear to be running somewhat ahead of a year ago.

With a deficit already in excess of $280,000,000 for the present fiscal year, despite an increase of $176,000,000 in receipts, Congress has continued to follow a prodigal course. The inflated third deficiency appropriation bill is merely a result of past follies. It is the future excesses that we have to guard against most zealously, and the spendthrift refusal to reduce the scale of expenditures to amounts that can be covered by current receipts.

Mr. Pepys Petrie.

There was a fine disdain in Lawrence of Arabia's observation that "all my life, objects had been gladder to me than persons." But it is certain that Finlay Petrie, of Opal, Wyo., would not have gotten where he is today if he had nurtured the same theory. It was an interest in persons, their small griefs and joys, comings and goings, that won for Mr. Petrie the trip to New York given annually by Country Home Magazine to the best country newspaper columnist.

The Opal oracle is a scribe after Somerset Maughan's heart. For only recenty the author of "Of Human Bondage" was quoted as saying, "I do not think the writer has a right to ask the reader to puzzle over his meaning." The most cursory glance at Mr. Petrie's account to his home-town paper of his Manhattan sojourn proves that a baffling subtlety is not part of his equipment.

"Got in this hotel," writes the prize-winner for the edification of his public back in Wyoming, "and they gave the wife and I a Bungalow, fitted out with more Towels in the Bathroom than we have at home." As far as punctuation and capitalization go, Mr. Petrie might be likened to e. e. cummings. But his style, even the most carping critic will have to admit, is modernistic.

Mr. Petrie should make good copy for his colleagues during his stay in their city. He is a ruddy-faced Scotchman, who not only writes as he pleases but speaks the same way. But it is doubtful if his reportorial tactics will be of much use to metropolitan colleagues. For he gets most of his scoops by listening in on party lines and women's conversations in his general store.

End Of A Chapter.

"So the nomination of Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, to be associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, was confirmed."

In that dispassionate language, following 34 pages devoted to the text of the debate, the Congressional Record for Tuesday wrote "finis" to an outstanding chapter in American history. It began with President Roosevelt's message to this Congress when it convened on January 6. It terminates with the confirmation of the Black appointment on the eve of the session's adjournment.

The connection between the message of January 6 and the Senate vote on August 17 is direct and inescapable. Speaking to the Congress over seven months ago Mr. Roosevelt said that "means must be found to adapt our legal forms and our judicial interpretation to the actual present national needs" of the United States. The means that have been found are personified in the person of Mr. Justice Black, as he will soon become.

When the President addresed the Congress last January he expected to make fundamental changes in the court as an institution. He proved this a month later when the court-packing plan, not merely as a recommendation but in the form of actually drafted legislation, was presented to the Legislature for the desired rubber stamping. From that time on all the other business of the Congress was, naturally, subordinated to Mr. Roosevelt's revolutionary proposal. The one outstanding issue of the session has been whether or not the judicial arm of Government should be completely subordinated to executive control.

It is history, and very important history, that the President was defeated in this attempt to put through that "change by usurpation" against which George Washington so specifically warned. But Mr. Roosevelt does not take defeat easily. To salvage something from the ruins of the court-packing project it was necessary to fill the post available through the Van Devanter retirement with a certain type of man. Senator Black filled the requirements admirably.

The President, it may be confidently surmised, felt that he must "save face." He needed, in other words, a nominee who would be sure of speedy confirmation. That pointed to a Senator. But he also needed a nominee who would be willing "to adapt our legal forms and our judicial interpretation" to the program of the Administration. For this purpose Senator Black appeared an ideal choice. In retrospect it can be seen that the particular nomination completely satisfied the political exigencies. It caused so much surprise only because the American people do not yet wish to believe that a President could regard the Supreme Court as primarily an undesirable impediment to unrestricted personal government.

Viewed in perspective, the Black nomination will be regarded as a subordinate part of the whole court-packing endeavor. It was a clever improvisation by the President, designed to save prestige, and as much of the original objective as was possible, after the complete collapse of his major plan. And as a political rear-guard action the nomination might have been viewed very sympathetically if anything less than the integrity of the Supreme Court had been involved in the issue.

As yet it is too soon to say whether or not the President's improvisation will serve to further the success of his policies. Certainly his nominee has been confirmed. But the tradition of Senatorial courtesy toward the appointment of a colleague has been shattered in the process. And even among Mr. Roosevelt's ardent admirers there is far more doubt than enthusiasm over the propriety of his choice.

Suspicion of the President's underlying motives, mistrust of the sincerity of his moralizing, have been augmented by this closing chapter of the court-packing episode. And that which sticks in the public mind is the intimation, given by the Black nomination, of what would have happened had the President gained the power of six immediate appointments which he sought under a deceptive cloak of judicial reform.

The suspicions which have been aroused mean that Senator Black's conduct as a justice will be scrutinized with unusual attentiveness. It will, for instance, be almost impossible for him to break the unwritten law which says that judges must not sit in cases involving legislation in which, in a previous capacity, they have been professionally interested. Should Mr. Justice Black attempt to violate this healthy tradition the criticism would be overwhelming.

Senator Connally thinks that there need be no suspicion of his colleague because he has in the past given little evidence of a judicial temperament. "I am willing to believe," said Mr. Connally on the floor, "that the Senator from Alabama . . . will abide by the oath he must take." And Senator Connally quotes that oath:

"I, Hugo LaFayette Black, do solemnly swear that I will administer justice without respect to persons and do equal right to the poor and to the rich and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge and perform all the duties incumbent upon me as an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States according to the best of my abilities and understanding, agreeably to the Constitution and laws of the United States, so help me God."

That is a stern and soul-searching commitment. It is to be expected that Mr. Justice Black, having taken this oath voluntarily, will live up to its letter and spirit in a way which will amply justify the trust his colleagues have shown. But a scrupulous regard for this oath will set limits to that "adapting" in judicial interpretation which the President seems to expect. And if the new appointee should obviously prefer the adaptation of justice to its administration it is unlikely that another Roosevelt nominee to the bench will be approved so readily.

Just because of that dilemma it would be premature to say that President Roosevelt has gained anything substantial by the confirmation accorded Senator Black. At most it is a Pyrrhic victory, a largely psychological offset to the defeat on the court-packing plan, the event which makes the session now closing really memorable.

The March On Washington.

As laid-off WPA workers converge on Washington for a mass meeting in Sylvan Theater next Monday evening, there is obvious need of clarifying the situation against which they are protesting. It is true, of course, that the WPA has been gradually reducing its rolls in line with the smaller appropriation granted by Congress. Undoubtedly this process has worked hardships on some individuals. But that is only part of the picture.

In the first place, the extent of the reduction is exaggerated by the sponsors of this latest march on Washington. WPA records show that fewer than 600,000 relief workers have been dropped during the last twelve months for which figures are available. Certainly there has been no such recent ousting of WPA workers as the sponsors of this movement imply. Nor does it appear that drastic cuts are yet to be made. For the number of WPA beneficiaries stood at 1,652,983 on July 17, and Mr. Hopkins has said that 1,650,000 relief workers could be cared for with the $1,500,000,000 appropriated for that purpose in June.

The ostensible purpose of the march is to bring pressure upon Congress for enactment of the Schwellenbach-Allen resolution, calling upon the WPA to provide work opportunities for "all unemployed workers who cannot find employment in private industry." Even if that resolution should pass, it could not be made effective without an enormous new appropriation. The American Federation of Labor estimates that there are still about 8,000,000 persons jobless in the United States. For the WPA to employ them at the average cost of $800 per year would mean an outlay of $6,400,000,000.

To talk in such terms, when the budget is unbalanced by the expenditure of less than one-fourth that sum, is obviously absurd. It appears the more unreasonable when the current increase in employment is taken into account. During the last year for which figures are available factory employment increased a little more than 13 per cent. In the same period the decline in WPA jobs was 19 per cent.

A considerable number of the willing and able workers dropped by the WPA have already found jobs in private industry. Presumably those who have not been reabsorbed into the country's economic system have become charges upon local communities. If that is not the case, it should be. As more normal conditions return, local governments must expect to reassume the major responsibility for care of the unemployed.

It is at this point that the plea of the National Job March sponsors becomes entirely unrealistic. They insist, not that the unemployed should be saved from distress but that they be given jobs by the Federal Government. Because the Administration clings to the WPA technique it is able to aid only 1,650,000 jobless persons even on the huge sum still available. That small percentage of the unemployed is unduly favored, while the great majority is denied any help at all by Washington.

By judiciously allocating available funds to supplement the relief work of local agencies, at least twice as many needy persons could be aided. If the Workers Alliance of America were really concerned with helping the unemployed in practical terms, it would therefore favor abolition of the WPA instead of making it universal. A misleading appeal for a policy that could only spell national bankruptcy suggests that the Alliance has motives that are not entirely humanitarian in endeavoring to concentrate thousands of jobless men in Washington.

Deserved Rebuke.

The President had good reason to administer a stinging rebuke to Congress for attaching the Miller-Tydings resale price measure as a rider to the District tax bill. "This is the first instance during my term of office," he said, "that this vicious practice of attaching unrelated riders to tax or appropriation bills has occurred."

It is particularly objectionable in view of the President's known opposition to the "rider" itself. And the unfairness of the maneuver is emphasized by the emergency character of the tax legislation which the President naturally hesitated to veto.

There may be merit in the Miller-Tydings rider, but that is an irrelevant consideration. The important fact is that the proposal would never have become law at this session of Congress except for a smart trick that defeated opposition efforts to have it considered as an independent measure on its merits.

On Picketing Embassies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently there has been appearing letters in the local papers protesting against a bill in Congress to regulate, if not abolish, "protest parades" before the embassies of foreign nations.

So far as my memory serves me there have been such parades in front of the German and Italian Embassies only. The reasons for these "parades" as indicated by the placards used was the "horrible murders" committed by those countries on its own citizens, or because those countries have sent their nationals and war munitions to other countries to fight in civil wars.

Search as I might, I cannot find where these same protesters have "protested" before the Soviet Embassy. It may be, of course, that the authorities in Soviet Russia have not been guilty of the same "crimes." If this be true, then, the reason is obvious why the Soviet Embassy has not been picketed. Let us hope this is true, and that Italians and Germans will take note. Under any circumstances, the world being jittery, I am in favor of a law prohibiting those spectacular demonstrations by irresponsible busybodies.

GROVER AYERS.
Washington, Aug. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am whole-heartedly with you in your objection to the picketing of embassies. In the first place I deem it to be useless effort, and, secondly, it is a breach of good manners.

Let the advocates of picketing name one instance where it accomplished even a particle of good. Who is so innocent that they believe the mere picketing of an embassy would put a stop to some evil? There are other ways of bringing to the knowledge of a particular country that their actions are not up to standard, besides the parading back and forth in front of their diplomatic headquarters here.

You could picket in front of the German Embassy here until the end of time, with banners and pennants calling forth attention to the persecution of Jews, but for all the good it would do, you might as well try to fly the pennants across to Germany under their own power.

The only time any picketing is of any value is when it is backed up by force—for instance the picketing of automobile plants out West—and I don't believe anyone wishes that sort of picketing.

Let's forget all this and concentrate our efforts on defeating any Jefferson memorial project that isn't worth while, or trying to reduce the noise here in town so that our nerves will pick up a bit. Legislation on the loudness of horns would be a worthy deed. W. E. D.

More Black Reactions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that The Post has been making a lot of unnecessary ado about President Roosevelt's Supreme Court appointee.

As President of the United States, it becomes Mr. Roosevelt's privilege and duty to appoint someone who adheres to his principles and policy. I doubt the Hardings, the Coolidges or the Hoovers would disagree with this.

H. P. WRIGHT.
Washington, Aug. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorials on the Black nomination should be appreciated by all lovers of liberty and all human rights. Respected critics have termed this latest move on the part of Mr. Roosevelt variously as "cheap," an "insult to the people" and in your editorial of August 17 "an isidious sapping and mining of the citidel of liberty." Your words in this connection are worth repetition. "In this day and age the fight for the defense of human liberties may be a losing fight. Yet it is always a fight worth making."

Principles; how little they are appreciated today compared with some transient selfish advantage! It's like a voice in the wilderness today to cry for such intangible things. How few people, it seems, will refuse to sell their liberties for a piece of bread. To me, an ordinary man of the street, this act on the part of the President and the Senators who confirm it is not merely "cheap" and an "insult" but a perversion of the true functions of a democracy and prostitution of the Supreme Court.

A. F. COX.

W. H.
Washington, Aug. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Article 3 of the Constitution does not specify that a Supreme Court judge must be a lawyer, but that he shall hold office during good behavior, and there is no doubt that Senator Black will do that.

Senator Black may not please everybody; no one could. His record proves that he is honest and courageous, and his sympathies are with the masses.

If the American Bar Association had been in existence when the Constitution was written, it could have specified the class of lawyer eligible to the Supreme Court—one like the 400 able lawyers now in the Senate and House of Representatives or a corporation lawyer like the majority now on the Supreme Court bench.

President Roosevelt saw fit to name a man that the majority will approve and trust to his better judgment. JOHN RIGGLES.
Seabrook, Md., Aug. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is with the greatest amusement that I read your condemnation of Senator Black's appointment to the Supreme Court bench.

Come now, admit that your opposition is not based on Senator Black's inexperience and incompetence, as you so naively put it, but because your newspaper is an ultra-conservative publication, critical of anything new merely because it is new. Admit that your leanings are strongly Republican and that the New Deal program makes you writhe because its constructive policies are liable to upset certain hidebound policies of your own, to the betterment of everyone.

Sum this all up and it can be seen that you must naturally screech loudly, otherwise your backers and a number of your readers would raise their eyebrows at your apparently unexpected liberalism.

As for me, I would rather have someone with less legal qualifications and more common sense, the latter seemingly being greatly needed on the Supreme Court bench. At least Senator Black will bring the common sense to that body.

P. E. C.
Washington, Aug. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Hugo Black is a man of honor and deep integrity. He has an open, unprejudiced mind which is blessed with a sense of humor.

My family has known him since he was a young lawyer in Birmingham. We have always loved and admired him. We knew that he was destined to be a great man. He showed that same enthusiasm in studying the Books of the Bible as he does today in politics.

When intellect is guided by a heart which is sensitive to God and the needs of his fellowman he surely could not make serious mistakes. I'd bet my life on Hugo—and I'm not so much of a "New Dealer" either. Senator Black will not disappoint you.

(MRS. C. L.) HARRIET HAWKINS CHAMBERS.
Washington, Aug. 17.

Unions And The New Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If your Representatives and Senators in Washington were better informed upon matters of statecraft they no more would venture to regulate wages, hours of labor, production, prices or profits than they would presume to regulate the tides of the ocean or the length of the day. Furthermore, they would be quick to condemn any alliance of the New Deal Party with labor unions or union labor leaders. For they would know that labor unions have but one purpose which is to secure unfair advantage over others by means of strikes which always involve physical force and consequent lawlessness.

They would be forced to the conclusion that strikers who oppose peace officers, Federal soldiers or city police, who maintain organized pickets to prevent others from going to work are, in effect, guilty of treason and quite as much enemies of their country as would be soldiers of an invading army.

The huge financial contribution made by John L. Lewis's labor organization to the New Deal campaign fund has indeed proved to be a veritable Pandora's Box for the American people, responsible, more than any other factor for the frequency, boldness, lawlessness and the enormous cost of those labor strikes which have swept the country in recent months.

Gratitude is a laudable virtue and Mr. Lewis rightfully assumed that the President would find no fault with what the labor unions would do and that they would, so far as possible, receive aid and comfort from the Government in their warfare upon "economic royalists" and "predatory wealth." They have not only been disappointed in this but have boasted that at least four departments of the Government were in sympathy with them. What next?

HENRY WARE ALLEN.
Wichita, Kans., Aug. 5.

The Anti-Lynching Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We as a group shall watch with the keenest interest the outcome of the anti-lynching bill discussion at the next Congress. It does seem strange that the Federal Government will be overstepping its fundamental purpose if it should try to protect the lives of its black citizens; if under similar conditions these citizens were white higher authority would quickly step in if the States involved did not do it. Since the majority of the lynchings have been black men, justified under the same old pretext, then it doesn't matter to Senator Borah or anybody else of the same mind North, South, East or West.

We have always felt and will feel that those in authority in the South have attested by their silence their approval of this dastardly business or it would cease at once.

(MRS.) R. J. HAILSTALK.

Neighbors In Vermont.

Vermont remains the abode of ancient virtues which seems to be wearing thin elsewhere. Last winter Coon Coleman drove to a neighbor's and asked: "How about a little wood? I've been sick and I'm down." The neighbor waved his hand toward the woodpile. "Help yourself. Fill your sleigh any time."

This summer Coon, carrying his pitchfork, ambled down the road. "Seen you hayin'," he said, "and I thought I'd work out that wood." At the end of the fourth day he figured accounts were even and shook hands on it.

"All square now," he said, "but I'll do ye an ax helve next winter—for interest.

The Post Impressionist

John Flamsteed.

WHEN I asked Lieut. Maitland, who, with Lieut. Hegenberger, made the first flight from the mainland to Hawaii, whether he found use for chronometers, he replied, "Yes, indeed, I wish we had had three of them instead of two."

One of the uncertainties of the last flight of Amelia Earhart is why she and her companion could not in the end be located. "Gasoline to last 100 miles," she reported. But where were they as related to the island they were seeking? Did they know their "position," did they rely on "taking bearings?"

When De Pinedo made his flight from Africa to Brazil he "aimed at" a little island off the coast called Ferdinand de Noronha. He used chronometers to check his course, and had there been one second error in those chronometers he would have missed the island by a nautical mile.

Two hundred and ninety-one years ago today—August 19, 1646—the man who began the observations of the stars and planets that did so much for the science of astronomy and for the ocean traveler was born at Denby, England. This was John Flamsteed, a name probably not known to 100 people in the city of Washington today, so evanescent is fame.

It was to the whim of an autocrat that we owe the foundation of the Royal Observatory, at Greenwich, England, at as early a date as 1675. It was due in the main to an accidental circumstance. The discovery of the western hemisphere and the southern part of Africa extended vastly the field of navigation, and there was need for some assurance to the mariner as to his whereabouts upon the trackless waters. A Frenchman named Le Sieur de St. Pierre came to London with a scheme which he claimed would meet the requirements. But to King Charles II it was made known that a young Englishman on the committee appointed to examine the theory had reported that the Frenchman's methods could not possibly be applied owing to the deplorable condition of observational astronomy. The position of the stars, he pointed out, were not known with sufficient accuracy to allow its use.

Flamsteed issued his views under an assumed name, but when the facts became known Sir John Moore offered to give Flamsteed a private observatory, while King Charles decided to establish a national one, which was erected at Greenwich. It was the definite purpose of the Royal Observatory to aid navigation, to help in the task of maintaining His Majesty's navy in its supremacy of the seas and to give aid to the ever-increasing merchant fleet. Flamsteed was installed as the director under the title "Astronomer Royal."

* * * *

Started on this idea of meeting the needs of sailors, the work of the observatory, in the hands of a scientific man, naturally expanded in a scientific direction and ultimately the observatory became an international institution by its universal acceptance as the zero point of longitudinal calculations in the construction of maps and charts.

John Flamsteed was 16 years old before he began the study of arithmetic, yet before he was 20 he constructed a catalogue of 70 fixed stars and investigated the solar eclipse of 1666, and did other brilliant work prior to going to Cambridge, where he was graduated and also "took orders," so that he was throughout his career "the Rev. John Flamsteed."

A building he had on Greenwich Hill, but no assistants and no instruments except the few crude ones of his own. Yet he succeeded in fixing 3,000 stars with greater accuracy than had ever been done before. And his salary was never more than $500!

Just as the instruments with which he worked were imperfect so were the timekeepers of the day. More than 100 years before Flamsteed's birth a Flemish astronomer, Gemna Frisius, pointed out the possibility of determining the longitude at sea by the use of a timekeeper. The suggestion was first taken up by the Dutchman, Hugyhens. He was also the first to apply Galileo's discovery of the pendulum to a clock. Owing to temperature and the ship's motion the machine's accuracy, when at sea, was quite unreliable. It remained for John Harrison, an Englishman, self-taught watchmaker, from a carpenter's bench first, to make, in 1761, a chronometer sufficiently accurate to determine longitude within half a degree. Five years later Pierre Le Roy, of Paris, greatest of French horologists, developed a mechanism with the essential features of the modern chronometer.

* * * *

Yet even today chronometers, like men, get out of step sometimes. Radio time signals help out here. At least once a day every ship gets by radio the time to check its chronometers. And it gets its bearings for longitude by comparing the local time of the ship, as determined by the sun, with Greenwich time shown by the chronometer.

Thus do the sciences work together. Unfortunately not all scientists work together. And there is a side to Flamsteed that is not so pleasant. In his closing years he and Newton fell out, the trouble seeming to be for the most part jealousies. Yet in the end each man added something to the sum total of knowledge; and though his life and his work fade from men's memories, mankind takes a step onward.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Ex-Mayor.

IT IS A FINE thing that the New York Transit Commission has done in appointing Jimmy Walker, assistant counsel at $12,000 a year, with the probability that in a short time he will receive from a grateful public a pension of from $12,000 to $16,000 a year, exempt from the Federal income tax.

Mr. Walker served his people faithfully day and night, but mostly at night, for many years, and it may be remembered that his resignation, under fire, was prompted not by any sense of guilt or fear of any revelation that might have developed in a complete investigation but by honest indignation over the denial of a defendant's rights in a hearing. By coincidence it was Mr. Walker's own rights which seemed to him to be denied, but only an enemy of uncommonly sordid mind would think that a man of Mr. Walker's high character would put his own rights above those of any other defendant.

It was in defense of the rights of all defendants, for which he had contended tirelessly for many years, particularly in the Central Park Casino after midnight, that Mr. Walker gave up his $40,000 a year job as Mayor of New York and went abroad to spend five years grieving over injustice as an abstract proposition.

• • • •

HIS RETURN TO the public service after seven years' absence will be a matter of great joy to all who remember the fine zeal for official duty and the alertness to detect and rebuke dishonesty in office which characterized his service as mayor.

It will revive memories of the fine Tammany jurists who sat upon the bench in his time, particularly of the judge who also resigned in some disgust over the denial of a defendant's rights—to wit, his own—and who later was quietly restored to duty in another department so that he, too, might qualify for a pension.

It will bring back memories of Tammany sheriffs and clerks so frugal that they were able to save out of their comparatively modest pay, or to borrow without notes or other evidence of indebtedness, enormous sums of money which they sometimes kept in marvelous tin boxes.

Mr. Walker's return to office at $12,000 and his eventual receipt of a tax-exempt pension of from $12,000 to $16,000 a year will, in short, inspire all citizens of any decency with a new faith in the public service, and particularly in Tammany Hall and its standards of honesty in office.

It seems almost enough to guarantee the election of old Doc Royal S. Copeland, the Tammany Senator who has so often and so worthily been called the yardstick of mediocrity, to succeed Fiorello LaGuardia as mayor of the city which Jimmy Walker loved so well that he made himself a scourge to thieves in office and a model of citizenship for all.

• • • •

WELL, IT IS a thankless task, the public service, and all a man gets out of it after many years of service and a cumulative cash contribution of $10,000 to the pension fund is a paltry $12,000 to $16,000 a year, exempt from the income tax, as long as he lives.

Mr. Walker should get at least double the pension, considering that he did so much of his work at night around the Central Park Casino and in Florida and California and in suburban mansions where a man could really concentrate on public affairs.

It is a lucky thing that Mr. Walker is available now for the $12,000-a-year legal job with the Transit Commission, because, as everyone knows, there are practically no good lawyers to be had these days to perform the duties of his new position. If he hadn't just happened to be available it might have been necessary to leave the task undone for lack of a lawyer with sufficient ability and proven stamina to get it done right.

You have to get just the right combination of qualities in these positions, and the greatest of these is stamina, preferably of the kind which Jimmy Walker demonstrated as Mayor of New York and which Samuel Seabury, to his eternal credit, made famous to a public which otherwise might never have known what sort of man he was.

Siegfried Sassoon

By William Lyon Phelps

'Sherston's Progress.'

"Sherston's Progress" is the third volume of the war autobiography of the famous English poet, Siegfried Sassoon. It has just appeared, and to use the famous phrase from the Latin, the End crowns the Work. The first volume was called "Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man," the second was called "Memoirs of an Infantry Officer," and this last "Sherston's Progress." All three books are brief and are written in a style that commands attention. (Published by Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

• • • •

The hero was brought up as a young English gentleman, to enjoy himself in outdoor sports and indoor social gatherings; to feel no sense of duty and no responsibility. That first volume is full of charm as it gives a faithful picture of the daily life of a person who in England has never had to explain his idleness. Except for his intelligence, he might almost have been one of the irresistible young aristocrats of P. G. Wodehouse.

• • • •

Then came the war, in which he enlisted like other young English gentlemen. This was such a terrible revelation to him that in the second novel (however it may have been in actuality) he staged a sit-down strike all by himself; and although a company commander in the French trenches, absolutely refused to have anything more to do with the war. He fully expected to be shot. But he was sent to a sanatorium in Scotland along with the shell-shocked and other soldiers whose minds had been bruised by battle. Here he had the supreme good fortune to find a sympathetic physician. The result was that he finally felt he could not endure his own "spiritual pride," and went back into the army.

The descriptions, especially of the days in Palestine, are beautiful, he was far happier there than in the sanatorium. It is a most interesting analysis of what many intelligent and conscientious men must have felt in the war.

Needed Penal Reform

The question what to do with criminal degenerates, especially the most dangerous ones, those who assault and murder children, comes up again in California and in New York.

Everybody seems to be agreed that the prison and the asylum are the wrong places, though at present they are the only ones. These degenerates cannot be sent to prison until after they have been caught in crime, nor kept there permanently unless they have killed their victim. They cannot be sent to the asylum if their derangement is of other faculties than the intellect.

Our law still assumes that one who has no hallucinations, of thought or of vision, is "of sound mind." So he is, if "mind" means intellect. And it imprisons men for their deeds, not for their condition. These legal fictions, inherited from the eighteenth century, leave at large a class of men who are dangerous. And they are so numerous that in New York, Mayor LaGuardia says, there is an arrest for some form of sexual depravity every six hours.

The only two things we can now do under the law are both misfits. Some State ought to appoint a commission of competent alienists and penologists, with an intelligent layman as chairman, to study the question and make recommendations.

Argentine Elections

Nation Will Go To Polls September 5 Deeply Concerned For Democracy As A Result Of Roosevelt Visit And Spanish War.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Buenos Aires.

ON SEPTEMBER 5 the Argentine Republic goes to the polls and will, barring the unforeseen, elect a new President for the 1938-1944 term. Like the election in Brazil this is a crucial one inasmuch as it is the first general and national election since the nation was hit by the 1930 revolution, the depression, the fight against communism, the rise of pro-Fascist forces and the Pan-American peace conference. Furthermore, purely internal devlopments have caused the thoughtful Argentine to wonder whether popular will can be fully expressed in the polling booths or places. Certain recent by-elections have gone hay-wire, so the opposition claims, and vox populi has become the voice of the federal government instead.

Despite all the furor of criticism against the federal government for its real or alleged interventions in purely local elections and for restrictions upon liberty the visitor to Argentina is impressed by two facts. The first is the amazing freedom of expression in the press of the nation when it comes to criticism of the executive power and the tolerance and liberality permitted in theaters where national politics are lampooned, burlesqued and parodied with a realism which extends to barely disguised caricatures of President Justo. It was at one of these revues that this correspondent learned a new verb, santafecinar, from the name of the Province of Santa Fe. The comedian brought down the house by saying that Repetto or Alvear—two of the candidates—would be the new President unless the national elections also were going to be santafecinados, i. e. subjected to Federal pressure, so as to have the result in accordance with the wishes of the government, as occurred in Santa Fe when that province recently attempted to elect a governor.

Two Big Newspapers Follow Campaign Closely.

THE TWO GREAT dailies of Buenos Aires, "La Nacion" and "La Prensa" have been hammering away at the "institutional crisis," at the "decadence in political morals" and at "government by fraud." Both these papers have applauded the economic and social policies of the present administration because they were partially responsible for Argentina's rapid rise from the depth of the depression, in 1932-1933 to a level of prosperity which has put the nation on a very high credit plane. Both dailies commented in full on President Justo's address to Congress, in May, in which he gave an account of his stewardship in the last few years and in which he restated his belief in democracy and his distaste for the extremisms of either right or left.

But the passages which brought forth the most interesting comments were those in which the Argentine executive expressed his doubts about universal suffrage, suggesting that this was a topic which should be studied.

The background of these discussions about free elections goes beyond the revolution of 1930 and the more recent occasions when it has been felt that the nation was not having the fair expressions of popular political will it had fought for. After the scandals of the 1890's a new party came into being in the Argentine Republic and as a result of many years of campaigning it succeeded in having passed a new secret and compulsory electoral law. Four years afterward, in 1916, this party, the Union Civica Radical, elected a President and until 1930 it remained in power.

It would seem, that regardless of party, most Argentines came to look on that law as one of the proud steps in the nation's political progress. Elections were fair under it and Argentine democracy became a by-word in Latin America. The emotion connected with an alteration of that law is somewhat comparable to that which many North Americans felt when a reform of the Supreme Court was suggested. That law has been subjected to violence and to amendments by Federal and State governments, since 1930, so the opposition claims, with the sole purpose of permitting the victors of 1930 to remain in power.

On the other hand those in power defend themselves by saying that grave defects existed in that law and that they have merely done what was obviously needed.

Three Main Slates Presented To Nation.

THERE ARE three main slates: The Socialist Party with Repetto and Orgaz, for president and vice president respectively; the Union Civica Radical (one branch, because a split occurred in the party) with former President Marcelo T. de Alvear for President and Enrique M. Mosca, of the Province of Santa Fe; and lastly the Concordancia, which is the government group in which two parties work together—the National Democratic Party and the other branch of the Union Civica Radical. Its candidates are the recently resigned ministers of finance and of the interior, Senores R. M. Ortiz and R. S. Castillo. The latter has received the full brunt of most of the blame for tampering with the Santa Fe election.

Again referring to the great dailies of Buenos Aires, it would seem that there is very little difference in the platforms of the larger parties. And as one walks about the streets of this humming capital and listens to the political propaganda which hits one from every corner and housetop, one gathers that the burden of the talk which emanates from the Concordia centers relates what its representatives in power have done since 1930; that of the Union Civica is concerned with what the party will do if it returns to power in 1938. Its presidential candidate, too, can refer to his record, as he was president just at the conclusion of the World War. But, as in Brazil, the "outs" claim that they stand for true democracy and that the "ins" are "Fascistic" or "Rightist."

Again, as in Brazil, all parties are going to the people. Every conceivable method of placing their platforms and candidates in the consciousness of the masses is used

Interest In Democracy Found Highly Significant.

PERHAPS the most interesting feature of the campaign is the manner in which several Argentine newspapers have made themselves the spokesmen for democracy. For many months they have been sounding alarm after alarm and seeing in almost unnoticed incidents evidences that democratic institutions were being menaced. Every reference to democracy by any one of the candidates gets special editorial comment. One of these morning dailies warns its readers, however, that promises are not enough. A candidate must offer more than his belief in democracy, he must prove by his record and his life that he really belongs in the ranks of the middle-roaders.

One of the many editorials on the subject states that neither fascism nor communism has made headway amongst the masses but that in higher social and governmental circles the lure of the former has proved almost overwhelming. Another commentator makes the familiar plea with respect to democracy. He says that when, a year or two ago, everyone began to express contempt for democracy and democratic institutions, this was evidence of shallow thinking and observation and that the failures observed were not of democracy but of false democracy.

I have stressed this feature not because I myself am interested in the fate of democracy as such nor in what happens to it in Latin America. The sheer phenomenon, stripped of all preconceived notions about the merits of one system over another, is intensely interesting. True democracy such as we had it in the early days of our history in the United States never flourished in any part of Latin America and though there was an approximation to it in the Argentine, especially after 1912, it was never so rooted an institution as many others they possessed.

Regardless of party or personal predilections, there is hardly anyone who will deny that President Roosevelt's passage through Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina has had something to do with reviving interest in and enthusiasm for democratic and republican institutions in these nations.

It would seem, too, that the war in Spain, watched with such keen and loving interest at first, has finally come to make the Hispanic American nations realize that the two extremisms are capable of going to horrible lengths. Italy, Germany and Russia have not helped their own ideologies much by intervening in the Spanish imbroglio. And the manner in which the so-called democratic nations have cooperated and acted has had its influence.

Off the Record

By Ed Reed

"Yes, it's your canary, Mrs. Miller."

Shanghai, 1932

The American Policy.

Japan's Earlier Strategy.

Perhaps the most authoritative account of Japan's last attack on Shanghai, in 1932, is that contained in Henry L. Stimson's book on "The Far Eastern Crisis." Mr. Stimson was at that time Secretary of State and of course had unrivaled information on the entire course of events. In the following extract from that volume, published by Harper & Bros. last year, the former Secretary of State shows clearly his mistrust of Japanese policy, and his anticipation that her aggression of 1932 would not be final.

SEVERAL TIMES during the following weeks suggestions again came in from one source or another that the Japanese government would consent to a termination of the hostilities and to the withdrawal of its troops. I could not put any faith in the sincerity of such suggestions.

I felt confident that no termination by the intervention of the other powers would be accepted by Japan unless it involved a retreat by the Chinese, which would be equivalent to a victory for Japan and a humiliation for China. Such an intervention was manifestly one to which we could not lend our influence. Whenever such suggestions came to us, I was careful not to rebuff them. They were usually made at Shanghai through the local representatives of the various governments there who co-operatively handled the situation as far as possible. But in my instructions to our representatives, I exercised special care to make certain that in acting upon any such request we should not be led into urging propositions which manifestly would do injustice to and rouse consequent hostility from the government of China.

• • • •

NOW THAT the passage of time has made it possible to collate the facts as to the military operations then taking place behind the screen of censorship and to compare them with these Japanese suggestions of mediation, we can see that each of such proposals was immediately followed by a new military movement, and thus was apparently designed merely to temper the effect of that movement upon the outside world.

Thus, on February 3 and 4, immediately after their diplomatic advances which I have just discussed, the Japanese with their naval forces made their first landing attack on the forts at Woosung and a renewed attack at Chapei. On February 6, a new suggestion for negotiations at Shanghai came from Japan through the local authorities at that port. Immediately afterwards, on February 8, they made a determined but unsuccessful attack with their newly arrived land forces upon the Woosung forts. Again, two or three days prior to their main attack under Gen. Uyeda at Kiangwan, new suggestions that they would welcome a truce came to us from Shanghai. They were immediately followed by Gen. Uyeda's ultimatum and the attack of February 20.

Finally, in the last days of February just prior to their enveloping movement at Liuho and the renewal of their attack at Kiangwan, the now familiar suggestions came in the shape of a demarche at Geneva from the Japanese representative at that place, Mr. Matsudaira. By such a comparison it now seems clear that these olive branches were not intended to bear the fruits of peace.

• • • •

OUR PROPOSAL of the five points and the manner of their reception by Japan had thus served to clarify my mind as to the course which she was bent on following in the fighting at Shanghai. In the interests of the ultimate objectives which our Government tried to keep in view, I was not anxious for any termination of the fighting which would involve a real surrender of principle. I only foresaw greater eventual difficulties if Japan by our assistance got off without the moral condemnation of the world which she deserved.

Every fresh repulse which the courageous Chinese infantry were able to administer to her forces and the greater and more expensive efforts to which she was thereby driven, only served to make it more certain that she would not escape such condemnation. The inadequate size of the successive re-enforcements which she called to her aid and the difficulty in obtaining the financial authorization from her Diet for even such as she brought up, made it ever clearer to us that her militarists eventually would pay a high price for their adventure.

The higher that price the better the hopes for an ultimate reign of law in the world. It seemed that one of those rare moments of history had arrived when the soldier can render better service to future of law and order than can the negotiator.

In misery
Is Kankakee—
Its mood is far from sunny;
O'er pants it broods
For fifty nudes,
And hasn't got the money.

The group so bare
Has caused despair
Around a new school costly;
The figures male
Have no shirt tail—
They're nudist figures mostly.

"Pants we decree!"
Cried Kankakee
"These figures ain't in swimmin':"
"Okay with me,"
Said G. G. B.,
"But not upon the wimmen."

A sculptor new Then started to
Put trousers on each lad, oh!
The costs they hopped
'Til he was stopped
With fifty still unclad, oh!

"Oh my, oh me!"
Wailed Kankakee,
"Those nudes must have apparel;
Our face gets red
When statues shed
Their pants, and lack a barrel."

It's not to blame
For all the shame,
Which every hour doubles;
Won't some one send
The dough to end
Poor Kankakee's pants troubles?

Tom McCarthy

The Postilion

Into San Francisco And Out Again.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., Aug. 16.—It was a foregone conclusion that I was going to like San Francisco. That was my "journey's end," so far as my expedition as a tramp was concerned. I was going to be able to throw away my dusty hiking shoes and wear trousers with a crease in them. That wouldn't seem the ultimate in comfort to most people but after a couple of months on the road, it is a pleasure to wear even such an unnecessary item as a neck-tie.

TOM McCARTHY.

All day long, approaching San Francisco, I had hitchhiked through the rich farming country, of which the natives boast, "We haven't had a real rain since last March." As I trudged along, gaining but an occasional ride, I didn't think the valley's lack of rain a point in its favor. In the withering heat, I felt that it was a bit of "too sunny" California.

However, as you approach San Francisco you emerge into a climate so different that it might be that of a region hundreds of miles away. You surmount a little hill, mopping the perspiration from your brow, feel the breeze from the bay and grab for your coat.

• • • •

THAT CLIMATE and the beauty of the bay may have something to do with a San Franciscan's thinking. It's vigorous and visionary, and it's best manifest in those two new bridges which span the bay: The Oakland Bay and the Golden Gate Bridge. Mighty isn't really the word for them for large as they are and compounded of steel and concrete they're as graceful as the curl of a whip lash.

San Francisco is rather a twice-told tale, with its historic hills, its up-ended streets, its Latin quarter and its Chinatown. But there's a new excitement in the latter.

Taking very much of a tourist's holiday, riding the little cable cars up Knob Hill, and watching the ships criss-crossing on the blue expanse of San Francisco Bay, I eventually worked down into Chinatown.

As I ambled down Grant street, past the shops which offered dragon-emblazoned kimonos, lichee nuts and dried lizards, I saw a crowd gathering down the street.

The cause of the excited gathering proved to be nothing more disturbing than a dispatch pasted in the window of the "Chinese American," newspaper of the quarter. Old and young, some in native slippers and others in strictly Western attire, they were all equally absorbed in the dispatch.

One old man read the dispatch aloud, excitedly, as the others merely gazed. I went into the office, and asked what the crowd was reading.

The Oriental behind the desk, looked up and told me that the crowd was reading a news dispatch.

"I know," I told him, "but there's such a crowd of them outside I thought it might be some special bulletin from the Chinese war zone."

"They are reading news," he insisted, and refused to admit that the dispatch in Chinese script was anything but run of the mine news. When I pursued the matter and asked him how they got "coverage" on the war and what the developments were that interested the crowd in front, he held up his hand to stop my questions.

He smiled a quiet smile and said, "I am sorry I cannot answer your questions, because I do not speak very good English. Good day."

He spoke excellent English.

San Francisco's Chinatown may be seething with the excitement of wartime fever, but that is not for the outsiders to know.

• • • •

IN SAN FRANCISCO, for the first time on the trip, I paid for transportation. I wanted to take a look at Hollywood, before heading for home, and I think it was Hollywood's build-up of "bus transportation" in "It Happened One Night," which made me decide to take a bus to Los Angeles.

Possibly I expected to see Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable enter and take seats by the door, preparatory to community singing. Whatever my expectations, I was not prepared for the actualities of that trip. Possibly my difficulties arose from too long association with the open spaces of a box car.

It was a lusty crew which crowded through the doors of the bus terminal and I found myself the spearhead of a surge which carried more power than prehistoric football's flying wedge. That crowd of travelers moved, en masse, through the narrow door of the terminal and into the bus, with the resistless force of a tidal wave.

When it was over, I discovered that the wave had cast me into the rear of the bus, robbed of any possibility of a comfortable seat, by the wiser and more athletic customers. Whereas the other passengers had individual and comfortable easy chairs, four other uninitiates and myself were doomed to the rear seat, over the motor.

• • • •

I THINK we might have made out all right on the 12-hour run, even though there were four of us on the rear seat, if it hadn't been for the late addition of a woman with two children. To save bus fare, she tried to balance them on her lap. They were husky 10-year-olds, and I carried one on one knee for the better part of the 400-mile trip. The sailor on the other side was likewise pressed into service.

Officially, it might be stated that the valiant lady carried both boys on her lap. Actually she acted as sort of a base from which the boys could stretch out to ride, one on the sailor's knee and the other on mine. That was the beginning of the trip, and I'd still heard no community singing. The travelers in the comfortable chairs stretched out and dozed, while we exiles in the back simply sat and squirmed.

We were riding over the motor and an irregularity or change of speed in that quarter was immediately communicated to us in no uncertain terms. While the other passengers lolled about in comfort, we exiles in the back spent the time opening and closing the windows. When it was cool enough for the man on the far right, the man in the middle was on the verge of heat exhaustion. When the man in the middle had been made comfortable, the man next the window was reaching for a coat.

All the time the two youngsters, distributed equally among the passengers in the rear seat, squirmed as little as possible but squirmed entirely too much. One of them added to the general gaiety of our exile by giving vocal imitations of pigs and chickens.

After a while the sailor asked the young hopeful if he could imitate a clam. The sailor showed him how and the little boy performed the trick very successfully. He closed his lips tightly, puffed out his cheeks and rode in silence for at least the next hundred miles. We all assured him his newest trick was the best of the lot.

Tydings' 'Vicious' Price Rider Termed Unfair by President

President Says Irrelevant Measure Nearly Caused Veto of Essential Tax Bill; Hopes Burden on Consumers Will Be Slight.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt scolded Congress yesterday for what he termed its "vicious" action in tacking a price-bolstering rider on an essential tax bill.

Nevertheless, he signed the legislation, expressing hope the rider known as the Tydings-Miller price maintenance bill would not boost prices to consumers as much as some of his advisers feared.

He pointed out that to kill the price bill would have had to veto the tax measure, carrying funds for the District of Columbia.

The country, he said, will "recognize the unfairness" of placing any President in such a position.

Text of Mr. Roosevelt's statement was as follows:

There has been before me for ten days an important and lengthy bill to privide additional revenue for the District of Columbia. To this bill, during its discussion in the Senate, was attached a wholly unrelated amendment pertaining to existing anti-trust laws, insofar as they affect retail sales."

First "Vicious" Action.

"This is the first instance during my term of office that this vicious practice of attaching unrelated riders to tax appropriation bills has occurred.

"The country will recognize the unfairness of placing any President in the position of having to disapprove a major bill just because an extraneous rider has been attached to it. In the present case, I have no hesitation in approving the tax legislation for the District of Columbia, but I have distinct hesitation in approving the rider which weakens the anti-trust laws.

"Several of the departments of the Government have pointed out, in reports they have given me, extremely objectionable features in this rider and recommended my veto of the whole bill on this account. There is, on the other hand, some estimable opinion that the effect of this rider will not be as serious as it is feared by the departments that favor a veto."

Sees Damage Minimized.

"I have decided to sign the bill in the hope that it will not be as harmful as most people predict, and I call attention to the fact that one of the principal objections to the rider is that the departments opposing it believe it will seriously raise the cost of many articles to the consuming public.

"But in signing it, I express again the objection to this unusual method of passing laws, and I sincerely trust that future sessions of the Congress of the United States will forego the practice of attaching unrelated riders to important and specific bills."

Backers of the Tydings-Miller measure said its purpose is to eliminate price-slashing of nationally advertised products—cosmetics and other drugstore goods, for example. One of the sponsors, Representative Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas, said it would help stop "predatory price-cutting as a weapon of monopolistic large distributors to crush small business men."

The measure would permit manufacturers throughout most of the country to contract for minimum retail prices on their goods. It effectuates State "fair trade acts" and exempts them from Federal anti-trust laws.

Such acts are now in force in 42 States—all except Delaware, Mississippi, Missouri, Alabama, New Hampshire and Texas.

Rainy Skies Delay Check-up on Clew To 6 Lost Airmen

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 18 (AP).—Rescue fliers sought an opening in rain-laden northern Alaska skies today to speed their planes on the air trail of a native clue to the whereabouts of six lost Soviet transpolar airmen.

Bob Randall, a Canadian, planned a takeoff from Point Barrow to check up on the story of natives in the Barter Island area that they heard what might have been an airplane motor "four or five days ago."

Barter Island is about 300 miles east of here and 175 miles east of the route which the Russians supposedly were following when they vanished last Friday on a projected 4,000-mile flight from Moscow to Fairbanks.

Musicials Hold Enviable Spot In Coming Bills

Eleanor Powell, Jack Benny and Shirley Temple Due Tomorrow.

Loew's Palace—"Broadway Melody of 1938," luxurious melange of dancing, music and comedy, with Eleanor Powell tapping out her inimitable taps and helping Robert Taylor carry the thin story. Such "names" as Sophie Tucker, Willie Howard and Robert Benchley also figure in the plot or offer specialties, or both, and other important members of the cast are Judy Garland, George Murphy, Buddy Ebsen, Raymond Walburn, Robert Wildhack, Binnie Barnes, Charles Igor Gorin, Charles Grapewin and Billy Gilbert. Music and lyrics by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed, direction by Rol Del Ruth. Opens Friday.

Warners' Earle—"Artists and Models," star-studded Paramount production starring Jack Benny, supported by Ida Lupino, Gail Patrick and Richard Arlen. Specialties by Louis Armstrong's and Andre Kostelanetz's orchestras, the Yacht Club Boys, Ben Blue, Judy Canova, Martha Raye, Connie Boswell and Sandra Storme, with six prominent American artists also members of the cast. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Dancer Hal Leroy heads the stage bill, which presents Jack Starnes & Co., with Ann Anavan, the Manhattanites and the Four Robeys. Opens Friday.

Loew's Capitol—"Wee Willie Winkie," Hollywood's interpretation of the well-known Kipling tale about a child among British soldiers in India. Shirley Temple is starred and the carefully selected cast includes Victor McLaglen, C. Aubrey Smith, June Lang, Michael Whalen and Cesar Romero. Directed by John Ford. "Going Native," latest in a series of local talent reviews, occupies the stage as Producer Gene Ford's swan song in Washington. Opens Friday.

RKO-Keith's—"Borneo," the last picture made together by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson. Photographed, with many sequences in sound, in the country of its title, "Borneo" is said to disclose in their native haunts many previously little known animals. Lowell Thomas and Lew Lehr are the commentators during those sequences not recorded in sound. Opens Friday.

Warners' Metropolitan—"The Great Gambini," a melodrama with Akim Tamiroff, John Trent and Marian Marsh in the leading roles, supported by Reginald Denny and Genevieve Tobin. Directed by Charles Vidor. Open Friday.

Trans-Lux—An hour and a quarter of newsreels and short subjects, the new bill including war maneuvers on the Sino-Japanese and Spanish fronts, a featurette entitled "Jungle Playmates," a series of oddities, a cartoon and a Japanese travelog. Opens Friday.

Rialto—"Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," a reissue of the musical comedy hit of 1934, whose imposing roll of prominent theatrical names includes Jack Benny, Gene Raymond, Nancy Carroll, Mitzi Green, Patsy Kelly, Sid Silvers, Jean Sargent, Frank Parker, Shirley Grey, Ralph Morgan, Sam Hardy, the Boswell sisters and others. Opens Sunday.

Loew's Columbia—"Slave Ship," a return engagement of the thrilling slave-trade story which recently played a successful week at Loew's Capitol. Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery, Elizabeth Allan and Mickey Rooney head the cast. Opens Friday.

Little—"Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," revival of the celebrated Gary Cooper film that made the Nation pixilated-conscious. The direction by Frank Capra won him the 1936 Motion Picture Academy award. Jean Arthur is Gary's sweetheart in this. Opens Sunday.

Roadside—"A Texas Steer," comedy revival by the Roadside Players who hold forth during the summer in their barn theater on the Rockville Pike, above Bethesda. Opens Monday night for two-week run.

Sylvan Theater—"The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," with the F. B. I. Theater Group enacting this French farce by Anatole France, translated by Curt Hidden Page. Tuesday night only (8 p. m.) in the Washington Monument grounds outdoor playhouse.

Glen Echo Park—Continuous amusement from 9:30 a. m. daily. Swimming pool opens at 1 p. m. Monday is free admission night for ladies in the Spanish Garden ballroom, which is open every week night from 9 to midnight.

Millionth Syphilis Vote Mailed Out in Chicago

Chicago, Aug. 18 (AP).—The first phase of Chicago's campaign to wipe out syphilis came to an end today.

Clerks mailed the last of 1,000,000 ballots requesting citizens to vote on whether they would submit to a free and confidential blood test for the disease. So far, 63,203 replies have been received, with 59,414 favoring the examinations. The next step still be the establishment of laboratories to handle blood samples sent in by physicians.

Village Oracle Gives Scribes Here Few Tips; Petrie Admits Nervousness After First Air Trip

News Comes to Store of Celebrated Wyoming Columnist.

FIN PETRIE.

Local reporters got a few tips on news-gathering yesterday from Fin Petrie, champion rural newspaper correspondent from Opal, Wyo. In town with his wife for an undetermined stay—"maybe till Christmas," according to Petrie—he expanded liberally on the theory of journalism yesterday.

The ruddy-faced Scot, who for 20 years has been reporting the doings of Opal's 50 inhabitants—"There are about 40, but we let it go at 60," he explained—has a column in the Kemmerer Gazette, published 20 miles away.

The pungency and terse wit characteristic of his comtributions so impressed the editors of Country Home Magazine that they awarded him their annual $200 prize and gave him and his wife a trip which includes stops in New York, Washington and Chicago. The prize money will send their 9-year-old son to college in the fall.

"I stay clear of gossip in my column," he told an informal press conference yesterday.

"There's enough of that right in Opal's backyards."

Doesn't Go After News.

"Leg work? Plenty of it. I'm on my feet all day in my general store. That's where I get my news because that's where all the news is. I don't go out after it; it comes to me."

Party telephone lines provide plenty of information, he confessed without embarrassment. "I guess I know as much about what goes on as anybody else does."

Nobody is doing Petrie's column while he's away. "They won't miss it," he explained modestly, "and besides I'm getting my six bucks a month for it anyway." As for his store, he has plenty of assistants to carry on for him.

His store, by the way, offers considerably more than a gathering place for Opal yokels. It does a business of $75,000 a year, catering to the needs of ranchers in northern Wyoming.

Neither Petrie nor his wife, a trim, attractive woman, was much impressed by their plane trip down from New York, the first aerial experience either had had.

"Too stuffy up there," Mrs. Petrie said. "From the way Fin clutched his newspaper, I think he was sort of scared."

Bit Nervous in Plane.

Her husband admitted it made him nervous to see one wing of the plane swoop down as it banked. He had to keep looking from one to the other to make sure they were not acting independently of each other. "Would have felt a lot safer if the thing hadn't had any wings at all," he said.

"I'm not going to do any more flying if I can help it. I'd go bust if I got that habit."

The cleanliness of New York's night life made a great impression on him. "The girls don't wear much, but they're clean. My wife got one up on me though. One night she said, 'Fin, did you see the boil on one of those girl's hips?'"

Mrs. Petrie responded to this statement with an embarrassed "Dad!" and changed the subject by saying she had never seen such roller-skating.

Both obviously are enjoying the trip, which is expense free, Petrie's only complaint, aside from a certain giddy feeling caused by being interviewed and photographed so much, is that when he ordered a subscription to Country Home Magazine in New York yesterday, the dealer let him pay the dollar.

Decks Cleared For Saturday Adjournment

day, when a threatened "one-man filibuster" developed. After two days of debate, the McCarran bill to transfer air transport jurisdiction to the Interstate Commerce Commission, was laid aside, and may not see the light again until next session.

Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, energetic sponsor, was ill. For the second day the Senate fought over the measure, and Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, who denied he was filibustering, charged it would wreck the airmail and weaken Postoffice Department control over the mails. Barkley said it was "futile" to continue debate, and called up the tax loophole plugging bill.

From then on, things moved with more speed, with so much, in fact, that Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Finance Committee, occasionally questioned the chair on what amendments had passed. At one point, La Follette protested Senators had a "right to have an explanation of amendments before they were acted on."

In 15 minutes the tax bill was ready for passage, but Schwellenbach demurred.

"There has been complete confusion here," Schwellenbach said. "The chairman of the committee has not known whether certain amendments were adopted. The presiding officer has not. We have not had an explanation of the bill."

Schwellenbach asked that final action go over until today, so he could take the bill and report home and study it. Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, jibed that he would know little more after perusal than he did now.

Harrison promised to give any explanation of the bill required, but Schwellenbach said he wanted to study the report, and the measure went over. Passage of the tax bill, and the $98,880,000 third deficiency bill passed Tuesday by the House, will wind up the major measures pending.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 18.—Settin' Around (MGM): On the main title of many of the greatest pictures ever produced, you have seen the words, "Louis B. Mayer Presents." You have never seen the man himself on the screen, but he is one of Hollywood's most interesting—and most important — persons. Meet the "Big Boss" of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures.

MYRNA LOY.

Now in his early fifties, Louis B. has been in "show business" ever since movies were born. He started out with a little theater in Haverhill, Mass., pyramided until he owned one of the biggest theater chains in the world, and then branched out into the production of pictures. Today, many times a millionaire, he has a finger in most of the pies that are baked in Hollywood. Mayer is a man of daring.

In a business where most producers try to follow established rules, he delights in hurling millions into the production of "prestige" pictures—"Romeo and Juliet," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Captains Courageous." He also prides himself on his ability to "discover" new stars. Robert Taylor would never have reached first base if Mayer hadn't defied the judgment of all of his associates and said "That boy can be a star—and I'm going to make him one." He did the same for Marie Dressler, in the face of Hollywood's belief that people would never patronize pictures starring an elderly woman.

You hear a lot about the importance of stars, but the stars themselves would rather have a smile from Louis B. Mayer than all the fan mail ever written.

Final scenes are being shot for "Double Wedding," the picture that was interrupted by Bill Powell's collapse at the death of Jean Harlow. Today, I found Bill and his screen mate, Myrna Loy, working in an ultra-modern kitchen set. And because of that set, Myrna is taking quite a ribbing. It seems that the studio art director secretly visited her new home and then, for the picture, duplicated her own kitchen. The entire company, being "in the know," stood by to watch Myrna's surprise. But they watched in vain—Myrna failed to recognize the origin of the set. It is obvious, Bill Powell points out, that the stories about Myrna's prowess as a cook are slightly exaggerated.

On the "Live, Love and Learn" set (where Rosalind Russell and Robert Montgomery are still feuding, in spite of studio whitewash), I watched the inimitable Robert Benchley playing a comedy scene. The first take went off perfectly until Bob Montgomery burst into a shout of laughter and spoiled it. Benchley did it again—and again the same choking bellow from Bob wrecked the scene. A third take, a fourth, a fifth—and each time Bob struggled desperately, but lost control. By then, everyone on the set had caught the disease. "If the little Montgomery boy will get out of here," gasped the director, "maybe we can do this scene!"

tioned the existence of a court vacancy, would not discuss procedure in the case, but said there was "a perfectly sound proposition of law on the question of no vacancy."

"It is clear that Justice Van Devanter is either a justice of the Supreme Court or he is not a justice. If he is a justice, there is no vacancy. If he is not, he has resigned, and the record shows affirmatively that he has not resigned."

Attorney General Cummings said the suit was not taken seriously by the Justice Department.

Graves May Name Wife.

Black had not formally resigned from the Senate yesterday, and until he either resigns or takes the Supreme Court oath before a notary, he is still a member of the Senate. Gov. Bibb Graves of Alabama was expected to appoint his wife, Dixie Bibb Graves, as Black's successor. Both were flying to Washington last night, and Black may submit his resignation to the Governor today.

In his brief to the court, Levitt said he was acting "pro se" as a member of the Supreme Court bar and an officer of the court with the duty of presenting any information he may have that anyone "has engaged in or is about to engage in any unlawful act which will interfere with or prevent the proper and lawful administration of justice in the Supreme Court of the United States."

The petition averred Van Devanter (who retired June 2 is still an associate justice within the meaning of section 215 of the judicial code, and there is not now and has not been since Van Devanter's retirement, any vacancy on the bench.

The Levitt petition would not normally be acted upon before October 11. The court will convene after summer recess October 4, when Black is eligible to present himself for admission.

Cross Roads

Nearby Virginia was the scene of enjoyable entertainment last evening when the Bailey's Cross Roads Theater Players presented as the third attraction of their first season "The Late Christopher Bean," one of Sidney Howard's dramas in lighter vein.

Chris Bean, a young painter, had lived with a middle-class country doctor and his family for some years. When consumption claimed him, he left behind an unpaid board bill and several canvases which had been deemed worthless by this Haggett family.

Ten years later an article in a monthly magazine acclaims Bean's artistry. The avalanche of offers by would-be buyers, and the machinations of the doctor and his wife to secure the apparently mislaid paintings, constitute the nucleus of the action. However, the Haggetts reckoned without Abby, their hired girl, who has saved the paintings for sentimental reasons, and her thwarting of the mercenary schemes provides a surprising climax.

David Kaigler, as Dr. Haggett, gave the most natural and consistent performance, with Dorothy O'Donnell following close behind as Abby, and although she is a trifle immature in looks and voice, her understanding of the character was complete. Richard Stringfellow contributed a neat bit as Davenport, the art critic. Catherine Ryan presented a most decorative Susan, but Ada, enacted by Mary Gay, was a shade overplayed.

Theodore Field, Catherine Hensley, Charles Hohein and Neil Linger completed a more than adequate supporting cast. The production was ably directed by C. Adolph Glassgold, except for a tendency to permit upstaging.

Minstrel Team Broken by Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Death of James McIntyre (right), yesterday ended the 64-year-old vaudeville team in which he was paired with Frank K. Heath, shown with him in an earlier day dressing-room scene. The news was withheld from Heath, who is stricken with paralysis and bronchitis in his nearby home.

McIntyre Death Parts Minstrels After 60 Years as Partners

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 18.—McIntyre and Heath, inseparable to generations of theater-goers, were separated in death today.

James McIntyre, 80, the younger of the famous vaudeville team which made the Nation laugh for more than a half century, died of uremic poisoning at his home in nearby Noyack. He had been in a coma since last Friday.

The other member of the blackface team, Thomas K. Heath, 84, lay dangerously ill of bronchitis and paralysis at his home in Setauket, another Long Island town, a few miles from here. He was not informed of his partner's death.

McIntyre, a native of Kenosha, Wis., began his stage career as a dancer at the age of 10. He retired seven years ago after his long partnership with Heath had made them famous from coast to coast as the originators of a sketch called "The Ham Tree."

Their association, which grew into a close comradeship off and on the stage, began in 1874. When they announced their retirement after 54 years together, McIntyre recalled how they had teamed up.

"I had been doing a darkey song and dance with Mike Butler and Heath was teamed up with George Howard in the same racket," he said. "We were playing in Mike Butler's vaudeville theater when Howard fell sick, and our two acts doubled up. Tom and I got along so well together we decided to make a new team, and our old partners made other connections."

McIntyre, who started as a candy butcher on a Middle-Western railroad, dancing up and down the car aisles for the entertainment of passengers, returned briefly to the stage two years ago, appearing in benefit performances.

Miss Temple, True to Reports, Is More the Actress And Less the "Cute Thing" in "Wee Willie Winkie"

Preview of Loew's Capitol Coming Feature Reveals a Business-Like Little Player; Minstrel Lovers Mourn the Passing of James McIntyre; "Met" to Have a Star Who Plays the Saw, Speaks Six Languages.

By Gerald G. Gross

Substituting for Helen B. Bell.

NEXT to President Roosevelt, Shirley Temple probably is the best known living American. And "Wee Willie Winkie" should not only keep her regular followers in the fold, but add new ones.

Unfortunately, we missed the last several Temple bellringers. Didn't see "Stowaway" or "Dimples" or "Poor Little Rich Girl"—in fact, we seem vaguely to remember that our last meeting—until yesterday—with America's most famous screen actress was in "The Littlest Rebel." Or was' it "The Little Colonel?" That would have been about two years ago.

And so, sitting down yesterday afternoon in the cozy projection room at the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, we were pretty cold to the Temple charms. Not exactly cold but sort of forgetful and perhaps, skeptical. But now we're a Temple fan all over again, properly penitent for having allowed so many of her earlier releases to come and go unseen.

Studio oracles and others concerned with the making and exploitation of pictures have sent out word that "Wee Willie Winkie" presents a new Shirley Temple, one more interested in acting and less in being "cute." This would seem to be an authentic observation, even granted that Hollywood is somewhat liberal in dishing out "new" thises (sic) and "new" thats. We do remember that Shirley was more cute than anything else in her earlier vehicles, at least those which we saw, and we do know that she is a mighty serious little actress in this celluloid version of one of Rudyard Kipling's most beloved short stories.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer did full justice to Kipling's "Captain Courageous;" that English studio, whose name eludes us at the moment, was just as respectful of the late literary giant's memory in filming "Elephant Boy" and now Twentieth Century-Fox gives us a tale picturization which is admirable in proportion.

Mind you, we are not yet prepared to say that Writers Pascal and Josephson, Director Ford and the other key men involved in the making of "Wee Willie Winkie" hewed faithfully to the original story or not. It has been many, many years since we read it. The point is that the company has turned out a most satisfying production which, whether it be unadulterated Kipling or no, certainly does give us a handsome, clear conception of the India he knew as a young British soldier—hard boiled sergeants, thrilling mountain scenery, savage tribesmen and all the rest. Fiddling around with a manuscript for film purposes is no sin in itself, provided the end result is capable of standing on its own legs.

Or so we think.

The following communication, addressed to this desk, speaks for itself: "The Variety Club of Washington gave the inmates of this institution (District Home for the Aged and Infirm) a real treat last night (Monday). They sent out an operator and the feature talking picture 'Stowaway,' starring Shirley Temple. We get very little amusement out here and an evening's entertainment now and then relieves the monotony of life. So we wish you would give us a paragraph expressing our appreciation for the kind interest of the Variety Club. Sincerely, the inmates of Home for Aged and Infirm. (Signed) Hyman Sharin."

What makes a woman seem beautiful?

"Contrast" says Russell Patterson, noted illustrator and artists, prominently cast in Jack Benny's filmusical, "Artists and Models," which opens tomorrow at the Earle.

"It's exactly the same thing that makes a comedian seem funny," Patterson, leading connoisseur of feminine beauty, pionts out. "Beauty and comedy," he continues, "go hand in hand, for one sets off the other to the best advantage.

"Those qualities which make us call a girl 'gorgeous' are just the opposite of those which make us consider a comedian screamingly funny.

"Defining beauty is a dangerous business, but all through the ages artists have found beauty in face and figure marked by symmetry, regularity and harmonious proportion. Comedy, on the other hand, depends for its effect upon awkward situations, fantastic appeals, unexpected twists and sometimes physical ugliness.

"That song about 'a pretty girl is like a melody' means, to me, an insinuating, subtle and slightly sensuous melody. It could not possibly refer to a fast, wise-cracking number."

So if the wise girls want to take a tip from Russell Patterson, they'll stop trying to attract attention to their beauty by clowning, silly Gracie Allen-isms or Martha Raye-like antics.

James McIntyre is dead. That means little to the present generation, but just you ask dad, or his dad. They know. They haven't forgotten "Alexander" of the vaudeville skit "The Ham Tree," with McIntyre and Heath. Maybe, too, they were lucky enough to have seen that beloved minstrel pair do the coon buck dance at Tony Pastor's, applaud their "Georgia Minstrels" and cheer them in "Hello Alexander" or "Red Pepper." Their heyday was many years before our time, but we distinctly remember their successful appearance in Cleveland's old Opera House, long since razed, some two decades ago. It was one of fate's quirks that McIntyre, 79 years old, but hale and hearty almost to the end, should precede in death his old partner, Thomas Heath, now 84, who has been paralyzed for several years. May they resume their delicious routines on that other plane some day.

Junior Miss Unconcerned About Adult Style Trends; Wants Her Clothes 'Interesting'

Distinctiveness Is Sought, Reports Young Designer

Teen-Age Girls Have Own Ideas of Correct Fashions; Inspiration for Frock Drawn From History, Scenery, Current Events.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE SKIRT LENGTH controversy may cause designers to argue across the Atlantic and stylists to tear their hair in protest, but to the junior miss who is assembling a back-to-school wardrobe it is a matter of no concern whatsoever. This surprising bit of inside human interest was expounded by Martha Gale, who designs dresses for girls from 9 to 17, and who conducted a fashion show of her new fall creations in a Washington store this week.

"You are dealing with ideas, not ironclad style trends when you design for young girls," she laughingly explained. "They decide they want to wear their clothes extremely short or longer than a fashion dictum, and no one can do anything about changing their minds on the subject."

Miss Gale, who is only 23, petite and blonde, and just out of college a few years herself, has a very sympathetic understanding of the needs and desires of juveniles. In her traveling about the country, she talks with teen-age girls about their clothes likes and dislikes and then incorporates these suggestions in her designing.

Seeks Distinctiveness.

"In creating styles for the junior miss, I try to make them distinctive and individual, rather than following an adult style trend or fashion whim; Junior styles are definitely in a class by themselves," she said. In response to the usual question, "Where do you get inspiration for your creations?" this youthful designer answered: "From scenery, house furnishings, old-fashioned pictures and current events which are of particular interest to young persons." To illustrate, she explained that one of the most striking models in her fashion show had been inspired by a door panel; it furnished the basic lines for the entire dress.

Since young girls are often shy and ill at ease when meeting new people, Miss Gale has designed dresses for them which will stimulate conversation. "For instance," she theorized, "if interest lags, turn your back and have something to talk about—unusual buttons, exotic bows, clever contrasting bands and the like." This is undoubtedly the reason why all of her creations have back interest and are equally attractive in back and front. The same idea applies to naming her clothes, the title and the design being in complete harmony, as: Beau Brummel, which is an evening gown with 23 velvet bows marching down the front and the short sleeves; Problem Child, a suit which looks like a dress; Stray Lamb, a costume suit in black wool with Persian lamb bands as the chic decorative medium.

Necklines High or Draped.

Necklines for the junior miss, in the realm of evening clothes, should be either high and round, or a deep V draped with the material or filled in with bows or flowers, because of the youthful, undeveloped figure, Miss Gale maintains. "Waistlines this season," she continued, "are fitted and higher in front than in back. Colors and materials are subtle and interesting. Sleeves are short, long or the new bracelet length."

Color tones in Miss Gale's scheme for distinctive designing are as cleverly named as they are effective—campus green, pledge blue, dance-time aqua, raspberry, rebel red. "Raspberry is a good color for the junior miss," she commented, "because it lends itself so well to smart accessory changes. And black can be youthful in appearance if the styling is well-handled."

"The junior miss has gone haughty this season," explained Miss Gale. "Her chin is up and her waistline high." To complete the mood of these youthful styles, Miss Gale advises coiffures which harmonize with the dresses (influenced by old-fashioned hair styles), and natural-looking make-up. To be well-groomed, a young girl does not need an extensive wardrobe, maintains this young designer-stylist. In her opinion, a junior miss could get along for a season with two campus woolens, two classroom silks, one don't dress for dinner frock, a velveteen for general wear and an evening dress with jacket to serve for both informal and formal wear.

Slenderizing Gloves.

Paris (U.P.).—Women with short, stubby hands will find that there are new gloves which are slenderizing. The first and fourth fingers are in contrast to the rest of the glove or occasionally are stitched heavily to make a contrast. The effect is of longer, slimmer fingers on a slender hand.

Here are two distinctive dresses for the college girl, together with their youthful designer. The clever dancing gown below, designed for escapes from the more serious business of learning, is made of pledge blue crepe, ornamented with numerous bows of rose-colored velvet; titled "Beau Brummell." At left, below, "Problem Child," a suit-dress, made of brown sheer wool with wide suede belt and buttons in rusty orange.

Blue Hangings Declared Best For Mahogany

TRADITIONAL mahogany furniture is more effective against light backgrounds or those which contrast with the warm tones of the wood itself. Blue has always been a favorite color to use with mahogany, and it now represents an important color trend of the day.

Would you preserve the traditional eighteenth century atmosphere in a room? Then select one of the Williamsburg blues—shades developed after careful research by a color expert in connection with the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg. There is "Palace ballroom blue," an intense sky blue used on the walls of the ballroom in the Governor's Palace, and the lighter "Palace bedroom blue." Two other blues are included in the Williamsburg palette—that of the dining room in the Powell-Hallam house and the one in the Apollo room of the Raleigh Tavern.

If you would introduce a contemporary note into your mahogany room, select turquoise of aquamarine—colors that we associate with the modern decor, and both very effective with deep-toned mahogany. The flower blues—delphinium, hyacinth or periwinkle—are also lovely, either as wall colors or in fabrics.

Green is another color that is excellent with mahogany. There are several interesting greens among the Williamsburg colors, the best-known being Raleigh Tavern green—a rich hunter's green.

Old Pine Tree Quilt Design Cuts, Blocks and Quilts Easily

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 18.

THE BOY SCOUTS having gathered at the Nation's Capital some weeks back, it is now the turn of the scouting girls, who have been having a keen-eyed, but womanly, jamboree of their won up at Briarcliff Manor, a lovely resort which lurks on the northern outskirts of our town.

ALICE HUGHES.

Daniel Boonesses from 26 scattered nations have been attending the fifth anniversary jubilee—including a Japanese and a Chinese girl, who have posed with arms about each other for probably 5,000 pictures. A likely, lusty lot of youngsters Ye Old Trappers are, too—undoubtedly able to rub sticks together and start a conflagration whenever caught in the woods without a book of matches. And no doubt always on the lookout for dear old gentlemen to help across perilous streets.

Noted women have been making speeches at them, of course; notably our amazing Madame President, one of my fellow columnwriters, who talked on peace. A marvelous subject for oratory, but hardly noticeable in Spain, North China and other sinful portions of earth's area.

• • • •

Daily I have been receiving press releases on the jubilee. And perusing the imposing Scout letterheads, I have been somewhat astonished and teetotally thrilled at the numbers of widows of Presidents who have survived their eminent mates—proving all over again that a sentence to the White House is as dangerous as a pitched battle. There are the venerable Mrs. Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, who just celebrated her seventy-sixth birthday with a rousing family picnic. Not to mention Mesdames Taft, Wilson and Coolidge, all active and alert, and all honorary Gal Scout officers. And the girls had their minds improved and inspired—and even a good time, too, at old Briarcliff!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN.—I am still crying bitterly about the ducking Barbara Hutton received when she and her Great Dane, the Count, were tipped out of a Venetian putt-putt right into a nassy old canal. All those dime-store millions, a handsome count, a lovely child, and then this had to happen! Heavens, is there no limit to human suffering?

• • • •

Luscious Luise Rainer and Clifford Odets, her left-wing playwright papa, are reunited. Luise dashed East to see him as soon as she had finished a film, and they have been seen in local movie houses—and, evil minded Gothamites strongly suspect, holding hands, too.

• • • •

Ann Ronell, the darling little girl who writes amazingly pretty and successful songs, has been in town with her fairly new husband checking old friends—but just as we were getting Ann to squat at the baby grand and play and sing her little pieces, a firm wire from Hollywood summoned the couple back to the flicker factories, drat it!

• • • •

I still say that a hot anchovy on a smidgin of toast is the tastiest cocktail tidbit, and if I were a drinking woman it would make me toss off five or six and stagger blindly to the dinner table.

• • • •

One by one my best girl friends are getting back from the Paris openings, their minds ablaze with fall and winter styles. Mary Lewis, the store biggie, has turned up, but so far has refused to comment on the new modes. I'm betting myself a new nighty I'll get her to talk, or fall on my typewriter. Yes, the fashion crowd is coming home in a well tailored body, ready for another big winter of selling the dear ole public.

• • • •

Why, even I shall blow in tomorrow from my Paris commuting trip, but promise not to bore you too much with that darned fair. Just enough, probably . . .

• • • •

I learned by cable that my dear New York pals blamed me entirely for the fact that the Normandie hung up the new eastbound record with me aboard, claiming that I infested the bridge pestering dear Commandant Thoreux for more speed until the poor soul, driven daft, screamed to the engine room, "More oil, and don't spare the propellers, this little American dame is drive me crazee!" It's a black lie!

• • • •

Fashionist Tobe tells me that plaid jackets of the classic type will be terrifically popular this fall, which is all right with me, and hoot wumman! But gee, are we still gesturing prettily to Britain's new Scottish queen?

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Married a Year to Girl With Whom He Had Affair, Man Now Detests Her; Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man 25 years old with a college education. About a year ago I married a girl whom I have never loved and whom I am afraid I never will love. Why did I marry her? I married her because I had had an affair with her and had some sort of idea of honor that told me I should marry her. She is a fine girl and does more than her share to make our marriage a success, but I am a miserable failure. She loves me, however, which of course makes her contribution easier than mine.

• • • •

Since I have been married I have lost every trace of interest I ever had in everything, including my job. I think I may lose my job, but the worst feature is that I don't seem to care. Of course, I am making life miserable for my wife, although I try not to. How can I give her the affection she wants if I don't love her? My state of mind is such that I am beginning to look upon her as some sort of monster that I want to run away from. I have simply got to do something about it.

• • • •

I am considering giving up my job (before I am discharged) and leaving. I will give her everything we own, all the money we have saved, keep up my insurance for her and send her any money I make over bare living expenses. I can always make a living and she has a good job, which will keep her from want. There are no dependents.

• • • •

I have tried going away for a while, but I always hate the thought of coming back so much that it doesn't help any. I feel so desperate that I have to get this off my chest to someone, and get an impersonal opinion, before I do something I shouldn't. I can't even think clearly. Will you please suggest something as soon as possible. I'll be very grateful. GEORGE.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR GEORGE: The only decent thing to do—the brave thing and the common sense thing—is to put an end to this marriage. You have got to be cruel to your wife in order to do her the greatest kindness, and in order to be fair to yourself. You've got to make her see the truth as you see it, namely: That you don't love her, never did and never will; that the marriage, the whole affair, was a painful mistake from start to finish.

• • • •

If she is a fine person, she deserves something better than living out her life with a man who regards her as "some sort of monster" and who cannot—try as he will—appreciate her most selfless efforts to make their marriage go. Furthermore, if she is essentially decent, she ought to be willing to let you go. If she isn't willing, it is my opinion that you are entitled to leave her. According to modern social standards, no person is required to live in intimacy with another person who is altogether repellant to him. Incompatability is a widely recognized ground for divorce.

• • • •

No fair-minded woman would exact of a husband who did not or could not love her so heavy a price for his freedom as you are prepared to pay. If your wife has a self-supporting job, there is no reason why you should give her everything you jointly own, nor turn over all your money to her, nor keep up an insurance policy in her name, nor send her all your earnings over and above the bare necessities of life. What has been jointly accumulated should be equally divided; an absogreet his freedom as opportunity for making a happier choice of mates somewhere along the path of the future. If there were children of lute divorce should be arranged, and when the decree is granted, you should go your separate ways completely absolved from any future claims or obligations. Eacl. should the union, I would insist that you make adequate financial provision for their support; but fortunately, no such necessity exists here. I positively do not concede the fact that because a woman has been a man's wife, she is justified in looking to him for a lifetime's support. Moreover, no self-respecting modern woman expects it.

• • • •

In my opinion, it is not good judgment, nor should it be necessary to resign your job and leave town. Surely your wife is capable of making a civilized adjustment to the inevitable. Stand your ground, hang onto your job, and see the thing through to a finish right here. You will need a job and guaranteed income to meet the expense of divorce proceedings. The whole thing can be expedited by your remaining on the scene. Your wife may elect to go elsewhere and obtain a speedier divorce than is obtainable in local courts, if you make her digest the truth. You will only be a hunted man (in your own conscience, at least) if you run away.

• • • •

You should speak plainly, bravely and firmly with your wife, and you should consult a lawyer. It's up to you to decide whom to approach first. It might be shooting more squarely to state your attitude to your wife before consulting a lawyer. But if you anticipate a furious scene with her, it may be best to inform yourself about what your inalienable human rights are, and how they may be legally safeguarded, before bringing matters to a head.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Jewish Physicians.

A book just published is the editorial work of a number of distinguished Jewish physicians. It is published to aid the Histadruth, a movement to aid Jews to social regeneration through productive labor on their own lands. Its activities, however, are not restricted to Palestine, but in Poland, Germany and other places in Europe young Jewish men and women are being put back to the land on communal farms.

I was very much honored to be invited to contribute to this volume, called "Medical Leaves." The different articles show the wide range of interest of the Jewish physician, Dr. William J. Mayo writes about his books and his reading of the early clinicians whose writings were introduced to him by his father. He refers to the many astute observations of Sydenham nearly 300 years ago (1624-1689) which are just as applicable as then.

For instance, Sydenham pointed out the difference in what might be called insulation against heat and cold in men and women. Women, because of the well distributed panniculus of fat all over the body, are less affected by heat and cold than are men, who even when clothed in heavy dress suits are chilly, whereas the women in light evening dress and decolletage are comfortable. The kidneys in women are more active than in men, maintaining circulatory equilibrium, perhaps one reason why blood pressure may not carry as high a danger to the heart as in men. Swollen ankles, it was pointed out, are a sign of much more grave import in men than in women.

Here also are recorded the observations of James Paget. He spoke of how the blood vessels became calcified and chalky as age advances—that man became earthy in his vessels and his organs as if he were preparing for the grave.

Mr. Bucknell Sails to Geneva

New Consul to Be Joined Later by Wife and Two Sons.

HOWARD BUCKNELL, jr., formerly assistant in the Division of Current Information at the State Department, sailed yesterday for his new post as United States consula at Geneva.

Mrs. Bucknell will follow him in about a month with the two boys. They came down from East Hampton, Long Island, where they were visiting with their aunt, Mrs. Dickson Potter, to bid their father bon voyage.

It is very likely that the boys will attend school in Switzerland this coming year, as their father did before them.

Prentiss Gilbert, whom Mr. Bucknell succeeds, has gone to Berlin to be counselor at the American Embassy.

Lawrence Bakers Returning to U. S.

Expect to Attend Forest Hills Tennis Tourney.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker, who left Washington early in the summer for a trailer tour of England, are on their way back to this country and expect to arrive here in time for the tennis tournament at Forest Hills.

As Mr. Baker is secretary of the International Lawn Tennis Association, they saw both the Wimbledon and the Davis Cup matches.

when I get to it," Graves said. "Senator Black hasn't resigned. He might not resign until October. I am going to Indianapolis to attend the meeting of the Young Democrats and help elect my secretary, Pitt Tyson Maner, president."

Asked if Mrs. Graves would go to Indianapolis, too, he laughed and said:

"I don't know. That's what we came here to see about."

Previously, the Associated Press reported, she had been questioned on the same subject by reporters in Atlanta, and said, cryptically:

"I think it takes women as well as men—this business of life."

When Mrs. Graves was asked about women in public life, she said:

"Well, why don't you ask Mrs. Caraway about that? She's already in a position to know about it."

Elsewhere, it was learned, Gov. Graves' visit is for consultation with Senators Bleak and John H. Bankhead, and with President Roosevelt, on his course of action.

The Governor indicated last night he will consult the Senators. In Alabama, said natives of the State here, a hot controversy centers about a provision of the State constitution requiring the Governor to call an election "forthwith" when a vacancy occurs in the State's senatorships.

The issue is whether this provision requires an early date for the election or simply directs the Governor to act at once in setting a date for the ballot. In the latter event, Graves could fix the date as much as a year distant, then appoint Mrs. Graves to serve during this period.

In reliable quarters here it was said the Governor will follow such a course if he feels it is possible. This was confirmed in Associated Press dispatches from Montgomery. In other sources, it was pointed out the Governor will not be eligible to run for the Senate until a year after his term as Governor expires. It ends January 1, 1939. Hence, his appointment of Mrs. Graves would not necessarily pave the way for a race on his part.

"Mrs. Gov." Graves herself, however, long has been associated with State politics and is an able speaker.

The extent to which she has figured in politics was demonstrated when the Governor was tendered a victory dinner in Birmingham after his election to his present, second term. Speakers mentioned Mrs. Graves as a potential 1938 candidate to succeed her husband.

She is a veteran advocate of woman's suffrage and a great "joiner." Alabama College, at Montevallo, and Bob Jones College, in Tennessee, have conferred upon her, respectively, honorary degrees in literature and laws.

Distinguished in appearance, she appears tall, and younger than her 54 years.

She and the Governor are inseparable in outdoor sports, as in their social and his public life. They are distant cousins. Their great-great-great grandfather was the first Governor of Alabama. Their great-great grandfather was the second. But there will be no "Graves dynasty," for they are childless.

Borglum Leaves For Black Hills And Coast Visit

Gutzon Borglum, of Mount Rushmore, S. Dak., arrived in Washington late Tuesday and was joined yesterday at the Mayflower by Mrs. Borglum, who had made a hurried trip to their home in Stamford, Conn. They are leaving this morning by motor for the Black Hills and later in the season will go to California to join their son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. John M. Sterling.

While here, Mr. Borglum invited President Roosevelt to attend the unveiling of his sculptured head of Lincoln on September 17.

Pan-Pacific Secretary Is Visitor Here

The Post Club Editor.

Miss Ann Y. Satterthwaite, of Honolulu, executive secretary of the Pan-Pacific Union, is in Washington spending a few days at the headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. She came to the States for the recent Vancouver conference of the Pan-Pacific Women's Association and, after a few days here, conferring with officials and visiting friends, she will go to her former home in Philadelphia to see her sister before returning to Hawaii.

Women representing eight nations, including China and Japan, were present at the conference, according to Miss Satterthwaite. Mrs. E. C. Gauntlett, Japanese wife of an Englishman, who will be remembered in the Capital, having been here during the world convention of the W. C. T. U., as president of the association, presided at the sessions. Although, under the rules of the Pan-Pacific Union, no controversial subjects are discussed at the conferences, there was a feeling of tension as a result of the war between China and Japan, said Miss Satterthwaite. Mrs. Gauntlett and Mrs. H. C. Mei, who headed the Chinese delegation, are close personal friends. It was as a result of Mrs. Gauntlett's visit to China last year in the interest of a better understanding between the women of the two nations, that Mrs. Mei was persuaded to attend the conference. Women of both nations were obviously distressed by the war, Miss Satterthwaite said.

Miss Mary Bollert Is New President

Succeeding Mrs. Gauntlett as president next year will be Miss Mary L. Bollert, dean of women at the University of British Columbia. The next conference is to be held in New Zealand in 1940. Miss Satterthwaite, who has been honorary secretary since the association was founded, has resigned to devote herself to the work of the Pan-Pacific Union and the editorship of its quarterly magazine, Pan-Pacific. She will be succeeded by Miss Alice M. Keenleyside, of Vancouver. Mrs. Josiah F. Price, also of Vancouver, who was in Washington last summer during the Farm Women's Convention, was appointed director of publicity.

"Economic Interdependence" and "The Cultural Contribution of Pacific Countries" are the subjects for study during the next three years and the theme of the next conference. Miss Josephine Schain, of New York, will direct the one and Mrs. Marie Keesing, of New Zealand and Hawaii, the other.

The Pan-Pacific Union was founded by Alexander Hume Ford, now of Atlanta. Its purpose is the advancement of friendly relations between the nations bordering on the Pacific Ocean, through mutual understanding furthered by acquaintance, and it has branches in Japan, China and the Philippines. It calls initial international conferences on noncontroversial subjects, and after that lets the delegates take charge of the organizations which may be an outgrowth. The Pan-Pacific Women's Association, the Pacific Science Congress, the International Sugar Technologists Association and Pan-Pacific Surgical Association have been formed under its direction. Jane Addams presided at the first meeting of the women's association in Honolulu in 1928. The two subsequent ones were held there also.

Mrs. Lawson Among Speakers

Three years ago Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, then president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, the present president, both attended. Mrs. Lawson was also present at the Vancouver conference and was one of the speakers, as was Mrs. Josephine J. Doggett, director of research and club service at the General Federation headquarters here.

Miss Satterthwaite, before going to Haiwaii, was secretary to Dr. J. Russell Smith, now of the department of commercial geography at Columbia University. She desired to live in Hawaii and obtained a position there 18 years ago as a secretary with the Pan-Pacific Union. She has been with the union since and for some years has been its executive secretary.

Columbia Chapter Seeking Members

A membership contest, culminating in a class initiation October 8, in honor of the past regents of Columbia Chapter, is planned by the membership committee of the Women of the Moose.

The roster of the chapter was divided into small groups to work under the leadership of Past Regents Mrs. Richard Blankenship, Mrs. William Nalley, Mrs. Jack Phythian, Mrs. Anna Wagner, Mrs. George B. Clark, Mrs. Margaret Deegan, Mrs. Wade H. Mitchell and Mrs. Hans Sorenson. Credits will be given for applications for membership, for re-enrollments and for securing the attendance of inactive members. Scores will be kept and an award made to the winning team at the close of the six-week campaign.

THE SOROPTIMISTS—those of them who aren't off on vacations—are going to have a party Sunday that will make the vacationists wish they were here to attend it. Cecelia Bower, who has a cottage about 35 miles down in Maryland, on the Solomon Island road, is entertaining the club. Sailing, swimming, fishing, tennis 'neverything are included in the day's program.

MARY C. LEWIS, who, with her husband has been at The Glen, their summer home in the Adirondacks, all season, has entertained as her guests several of the Soroptimists from here—among them, Gene Bearmore, who is now visiting her. AND MORE NEWS of the Soroptimists: Marjorie Webster and her mother, who have been in England, Ireland, Scotland and France this summer, are arriving home from abroad this week, landing in New York tomorrow. Marie Tedrow is spending a week in a quiet vacation on a farm near Warrenton.

ELIZABETH HANEY, who was among the Zontians at the luncheon in the garden of Allies Inn yesterday, was puzzled when she noticed one of her blueberry muffins disappearing faster than she thought she had eaten it. She looked just in time to see the sister Zontian at her elbow, breaking off generous crumbs (her own muffins being already gone), to feed the friendly little sparrows which come begging near the garden tables.

And who could deprive a bird of crumbs?—so she broke off a few herself to share with them. They are fearless little things which come hopping up with the assurance of being fed as soon as the diners discover their friendliness.

MAGGIE AND JIGGS have twins. Maybe you hadn't heard before but it's true. They were born ten days ago and their eyes will be open any minute now, an event for which their owners are watching with great interest. And in case you're thinking in terms of the comic strip you're wrong. Maggie and Jiggs are bulldogs belonging to Mrs. A. R. Forbush, a member of the Old Dominion Kennel Club and the Baltimore Kennel Club, and a devoted dog-owner.

Maggie's name when she takes part in important dog shows is Irish Marguerite and Jiggs' is Gen. Grant, of R. K. O., but around home they are very democratic and don't insist upon their formal titles. Both are true aristocrats. Their noses recede and turn up slightly and their lower jaws were made longer than their upper ones by mistake, but they don't mind because the same thing's happened in their family for several generations back—and the "children" look just like them. At present the "babies" are called Kim and Jurgen, but when they are registered with the kennel clubs they will be given high-sounding names like those of their parents. Their mother is proud of them and encourages them to walk, although they can't see where they're going. The fact they are both bow-legged doesn't worry her either, for both she and Jiggs have bowlegs and it's their idea of beauty.

Zonta Women Hold Luncheon At Allies Inn

Garden Attractive Setting; Owner, a Member, Joins Party.

THE GARDEN of Allies Inn was the scene of the luncheon held by members of the Zonta Club yesterday afternoon, one of its special August meetings. The inn was chosen both because of the attractive setting offered by the garden for a summer gathering and the fact its owner, Miss Emma T. Hahm, is one of the active members of the club.

Earlier in the season Miss Hahm entertained the members at a party at her home on Daniel road. She joined them yesterday for luncheon and several guests also were present. Miss Winifred Burwell, president, called a short board meeting immediately following the luncheon.

Among the members present were Mrs. Katherine Ansley, Miss Elizabeth Beresford, Dr. Edith SeVille Coale, Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, Mrs. Emily Dickinson, Miss Esther C. M. Gude, Miss Elizabeth Haney, Mrs. Ann Harding, Mrs. Ethel Hess, Miss Frances Powelli Hll, Miss Caroline Longfellow, Miss Nannie Meem, Mrs. May Moyers McElroy, Miss Anna Muddiman, Mrs. Ann Preston, Mrs. Edith C. Salisbury, Miss Ruth Sheldon, Miss Mary W. Sigman, Mrs. Frances Gutelius Smith, Mrs. Louise Stambaugh, Mrs. Nan R. Street, Miss Mabel Strider, Mrs. Marion Hines Taylor and Miss Florence Thompson.

Legion Auxiliary Honors Mrs. Killeen

Retiring President Named Committeewoman.

Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, retiring president of the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion Auxiliary, was elected national executive committeewoman at the closing session of the department convention at the Red Cross Chapter House Tuesday night. She was also elected chairman of the delegation which will attend the national convention in New York City next month.

Other delegates from the department will be the new president, Mrs. Dorothy Harper; Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, Miss M. Edna McIntosh, who was general chairman of arrangements for the convention; Mrs. Perna Zopp and Miss Minnie May Hardy.

The election of delegates followed the election of officers Tuesday night and was not completed until after midnight. Mrs. Harper has called a meeting of her executive committee for this evening at the Y. W. C. A.

Union Printers' Wives Stage Fashion Show of Fall Clothes

A fashion show displaying thousands of dollars worth of fall clothes, a water-polo match, diving exhibition, and a buffet supper and dance, comprised the program for the major social event of the International Printers Union baseball League, meeting in Washington for its twenty-seventh annual tournament. The affair was held last night at Wardman Park Hotel.

The social events were planned by the wives of the union members and were attended by several hundred members and guests.

Beginning at 8:30, the fashion show took place against a background of flowers at the Wardman Park pool. Fifty models showed the newest fall dresses for college, street, active sport, afternoon and informal wear. Among those who modeled college clothes were the following Phi Sigma Nu members: Virginia Trew, Jane Coffman, Betty Halloran, Grace Raub, Margaret Riggs, Gladys Bray, Doris Henley, Marie Carballo, Zelda Dozier, Peggy Martin, Doris Kienle and Margaret Smith.

Wives of the printers who took part, modeling afternoon and informal clothes were: Mrs. Charles Holbrook, Mrs. James W. Dewhirst, Mrs. Evelyn Mosedale, Mrs. Elsie Crown, Mrs. Helen Beatey. The Misses Virand Doris Fleharty were also in this group.

An orchestra furnished music as the models promenaded the flower-decorated outdoor stage. Because of the value of the clothes, a motorcycle escort brought the merchandise to and from the hotel.

Features of the show—harbingers of newest fall and winter predictions—were the bright fall colors of the college clothes combining such shades as rust and green; the simplicity of the cut of the mink coats, the new cocktail dresses slit from hem to knee and always worn with cocktail hats that have veils galore; the striking coiffures.

The events of the evening were concluded with a buffet supper and dance to which those prominent in the printing industry—Washington's largest industry—were invited.

An athletic night tonight and a moonlight boat ride on the Potomac tomorrow will bring the social program of the meeting to a close.

D. A. Sewing Circle Criuse Set Today

Mizpah Women Going to Colonial Beach.

Members of the Sewing Circle of Mizpah Council, Daughters of America, and their friends will be guests on a special trip to Colonial Beach today aboard the steamer Potomac. The boat leaves the Seventh street wharf this morning at 9 o'clock and will return at 7:30.

Past national councilor, Mrs. Naomi E. Swann, will have charge of tickets at the wharf.

The State council convention committee has outlined the program for the coming State session. On Wednesday, September 15, at 8 p. m., there will be class initiation at the Mayflower Hotel. Voting members will obtain admittance and voting slips and their badge Wednesday. The morning of September 16 the State session will begin with a public meeting. Thursday afternoon there will be a memorial service, nominations, and reports and that night the fellowship banquet, with a ball following. Friday morning and afternoon will be devoted to business and Friday night, a public installation is to be conducted.

Debs to Model.

Society of Warrenton and the adjoining countryside will see something new in the way of "pageants" tonight. Wedding gowns of several generations will be worn by debs, subdebs and newlyweds in a benefit "Pageant of Brides" in the parish house of Casanova Church.

Model Houses Revive Victorian Furniture

The interest in Southern antebellum interiors which has been reflected in so many of the model houses and rooms on display this year, has served, perhaps, to hasten the present Victorian revival. Certainly it is now possible to find examples of good Victorian furniture and accessories without any difficulty. Furniture appears in mahogany, walnut and rosewood—the favored woods of the period.

There are carpets in the all-over floral patterns beloved of our grandmothers, but in colors keyed to the decorative trends of today.

Senate Group Backs Newman For D. C. Court

Favorable Report Today; Conference on Adoption Bill Approved.

A sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee was prepared to make a favorable report today on the confirmation of Hobart Newman as District Police Court judge.

Newman was questioned yesterday by the sub-committee, of which Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, is chairman, in executive session. A representative of the Attorney General also was present.

Meanwhile the District's legislative calendar was being cleared rapidly as the Senate and House approved a conference report on the adoption bill and the House accepted Senate amendments to the real estate commission measure.

Both of these bills now go to the President for his signature. The adoption bill sets up a modern procedure for adoption of minors, while the second measure creates a commission to administer and license real estate operators in Washington.

At the same time the House asked for a conference on the juvenile court bill, the only important local legislation pending. A parley may be held today.

The Senate District Committee decided by a polled vote to report favorably the omnibus House bill amending the liquor control act.

This measure bars the importation of more than a gallon of beverages at one time for private consumption, eliminates the requirement of bonds for retail liquor dealers, makes the advertising of license renewals unnecessary, and gives the ABC board discretion in posting notices in front of places closed by its orders.

The bill will be called up in the Senate, Senator King said, at the first opportunity.

Timothy B. Regan, Legionnaire, Dead

Timothy B. Regan, 47, life-long resident of Washington and an employe of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving for many years, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital. He had been ill for several months.

Funeral services will be held at his home, 4402 Fourteenth street northeast at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning followed by requiem mass at 10 in St. Martin's Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Farley's Attitude.

Early this week, Postmaster General Farley addressed the Convention of Postmasters of North Carolina and South Carolina, in Fayetteville, N. C., and in the course of his remarks (which were mostly routine and perhaps not widely circulated) he gave clear expression of his attitude on employe relationship. We think that what he said would delight the local and active Government employe unions and so here are appended some quotations:

"Also, with reference to the welfare of the employes I think all postmasters know by this time, but it will bear repetition, that I have followed a policy of straight fair dealing with the employes. Of course we can do no bargaining with any group regarding rates of pay, as the rates are fixed by Congress and the President. We do, however, receive the employes and their representatives. They present their requests and grievances in a business-like way. We have a free and open discussion with them and after considering all the elements involved we make our decisions . . .

"The frank discussions of the employes' problems are helpful and we have not had, to my knowledge, a single instance where bad feeling was shown in these discussions. This is to the credit of all concerned. Postmasters will find it most helpful if they follow this practice with their local groups. You do not surrender one iota of your authority when you receive representatives of postal organizations for a proper discussion of their grievances.

"Some of the grievances are probably imaginary or greatly exaggerated. But even in these cases it is better to hear them."

Delegates.

Victor H. Cahalane, acting chief of the Wildlife Division, and David H. Madsen, supervisor of Fish Resources, (National Park Service, Interior) will represent their department at a convention of scientists in Mexico City the last week in this month. Other delegates from the Government include: Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, chief, Biological Survey, and Frederick Lincoln, a member of the staff; Frank Bell, commissioner, Bureau of Fisheries, and Carl Schoemaker, clerk of the Senate Committee on Wildlife Resources. Ambassador and Mrs. Josephine Daniels will receive the delegates.

U. F. W. A. Notes.

Local No. 4 announces a party for August 21, at 2020 G street northwest—the hour is 8 p. m. . . . The same local (Resettlement) reports that it has secured the reinstatement of Charles McCoy, an RA employe, who, they charge, was dismissed for union activity . . . President Baker and Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson have been in New York conferring with the president of the National Association of Customs Employes . . . The Customs Service Employes Association is one of the oldest independent Government employe groups . . . Henry Rhine, U. F. W. A. national organizer, leaves late this week for a transcontinental organizing trip . . . The first stop-off is Boston, then Detroit, Chicago Minneapolis, Denver and San Francisco; a view is to have regional organizers appointed in Detroit, Minneapolis, Denver and San Francisco . . . U. F. W. A. locals now number 30; the latest are in Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation and Social Security Board, Denver.

Farley Again.

Postmaster General Farley has given definite assurance that he will attend the convention of the National Association of Postoffice Clerks, to be held September 6-11 in Toledo, Ohio. The P. O. general will speak on the 7th. His address will be a highlight of the largest gathering of postal clerks ever held in this country. Representatives of approximately 2,000 postoffices and 48 States will be in attendance. A banquet on Thursday evening, September 9, will be addressed by First Assistant Postmaster General William W. Howes.

F. B. I. Players.

The popular F. B. I. theater group, known as the G-men, will present the famous old French farce, "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," in the National Sylvan Theater at the Washington Monument Tuesday evening. The event is under the joint auspices of the Community Center Department and the Office of National Capitol Parks, Interior Department. This will be the third appearance of the G-men on a Sylvan Theater Festival program.

The play is directed by J. Francis Buckley, assisted by Milton Freedman, with Fordyce G. Lyman in charge of the stage and properties, and Miss Mary Kramer director of costumes. A large publicity committee includes Miss Dorothy Hair, Clayton Braathen, Harry Davis and L. T. Evans. The event will also feature the only appearance this season at the Sylvan Theater of the United States Army Band, conducted by Capt. Thomas F. Darcy. Capt. Darcy has arranged a special musical program in keeping with the period and theme of the G-Men's play. The band concert begins at 7:30 p. m., the play at 8.

Moonlight.

A good time is in store for members of the Public Works Recreational Association and their friends Monday evening. They have chartered the Wilson Line steamer City of Washington, and will cruise down the Potomac. The boat leaves at 8:30 p. m.

FAT WOMEN SMOTHER IN TIGHT GIRDLES

Tight girdles and stiff foundation garments actually make many women look fatter. Instead of squeezing your fat, why don't you try to get rid of it? Why not have a slim, lovely, youthful figure that needs but little girdle control?

Thousands of overweight women have found that the Marmola way is the easy way to get rid of ugly fat. Just take 4 Marmola Prescription Tablets each day, and in place of starchy foods like potatoes and pastries, eat more salads, fruits, green vegetables, and go slow on fatty meats. That's simple, isn't it? Yet what a difference Marmola and this little change in your diet may make in your weight. Losses of 5 to 8 pounds a week have been reported in many cases from this simple, easy method of reducing. Marmola Prescription Tablets contain the same element prescribed by many doctors in treating their fat patients. Get a box at your druggist today and send that ugly fat on its way.

Stay Is Granted To Kidnap Suspect

Mrs. Marion W. Campbell, Washington high school teacher under bond for action of the grand jury on a charge of abducting a 20-month-old Beltsville, Md. child, yesterday was granted a continuance of two weeks and a charge of driving under the influence of liquor.

John S. White, her attorney, said Mrs. Campbell was still in a highly nervous condition. The charges were preferred against Mrs. Campbell after she allegedly seized Phillip Shane from in front of his home and drove him to Berwyn, Md.

Knighthood Flowers Again in Horsemen's Tourney at Marshall Hall

Knighthood in all its flower lived once more as the equestrians rode forth to do battle with suspended rings in the Maryland park. There were no banners floating in the breeze, and armor was lacking, but trumpets sounded. Women cheered and medieval days lived once more. This is a general view of the contest.

Knighthood flowered again yesterday at historic Marshall Hall, where fifteen Maryland and Virginia horsemen grabbed their lances and jousted with a medieval fervor—slightly tempered by the strains of "Dixie."

They tilted for the sake of naming a tournament queen, for several cash prizes, and just because Marylanders and their neighbors like games played from horseback.

No doubt about it, King Arthur and his men would have loved it. Especially when the ancient traditions got mixed up with 1937 customs and the chief herald had to call such things as:

After such an introductory warning to each contestant the herald yelled: "Charge, Sir Knight!" The bugler sounded stirring brassy notes and down the 350-foot field came the determined jouster with lance raised to pick off the one-inch-in-diameter rings hanging from cross-beams of three goal posts stationed 90 feet apart.

Strong and steady arms, keen eyes, and plenty of balancing ability were required by the knights who came riding back to the judges' stand with all three rings on their lances.

For the successful ones the band played gay music, sometimes "The Washington and Lee Swing" and sometimes the Southern anthem. The knights were wearing no armor, and not even colors supplied by their ladies, but ladies lined the field and cheered on the contestants indiscriminantly.

At the end of the third round, five knights had perfect scores and so were entitled to ride again. This time the rings were but one-half inch in diameter. From one post to another they were scarcely visible to the spectators.

Two of the knights made perfect scores, however, and had to ride twice more before it was determined that young W. M. Hennesy, of Hagerstown, Md., the Knight of Old Glory, was winner of first place, and Phil Love, of Colesville, Md., the Knight of Prince George, winner of second place.

Ranking third was Brooke Kirby, of Oxon Hill, Md., and fourth was H. J. Hennesy, father of the 23-year-old champion. Fifth place went to A. Hungerford, of Marshall Hall; sixth to J. H. Burtner, of Boonesboro, Md., and seventh to his 12-year-old son, Walden Burtner, the youngest jouster in the tournament.

The Knight of Old Glory had to hurry back to Hagerstown and so gave the honor of naming the queen to Ernest Willett, who rode under the title of Knight of Sharpsville. Willett remained for the evening dance and crowned as queen his 17-year-old sister, Beatrice Willett.

A. D. Langley, of Clarendon, Va., was the veteran rider among the 15. He admitted to tilting 47 years ago and " in 1,000 tournaments." Mr. Langley rode as the Knight of Arlington. He said he had missed only a few of the early Marshall Hall bouts. Yesterday's was the fifty-third held there.

Rudolph Carrico, of the Maryland Legislature, was orator of the afternoon.

Police Plan Traffic Study At University

Recent Survey Puts District High in Rating of Auto Deaths.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

At least four police captains and two privates will be assigned to study the "Kreml" system of accident prevention and traffic control at the University of Maryland beginning September 20, it was reported last night.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, said his department will adopt methods of scientific traffic investigation in an effort to reduce accidents and save lives.

In addition to sending several picked men to study the Kreml course, Maj. Brown will seek new equipment for cruiser cars assigned to traffic investigation work. New cameras already have been ordered and Maj. Brown hopes to provide each traffic squad with modern devices to analyze accident causes.

Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, nationally known traffic authority of Evanston, Ill., visited Washington as guest of The Post last winter and urged local authorities to adopt such scientific measures to curb the rising traffic fatality toll.

Kreml to Head Course.

Under his personal supervision, the Maryland University course will continue through October 1. Traffic experts and engineers will act as instructors. Similar classes now are in progress throughout the country. The Maryland course will be conducted in co-operation with the Maryland State Police and Baltimore Safety Council.

Maj. Brown is expected to send Capt. Milton D. Smith, traffic division commander; Capt. Arthur Miller, commander of the Third Precinct; Capt. Lloyd Kelly, Eighth Precinct; Capt. Harvey Callahan, First Precinct, and two privates from the traffic division.

"These men," said Maj. Brown, "will study traffic from all angles, and will be expected to pass on what they learn to other members of the department."

Maj. Brown said he also plans to adopt a new policy of comprehensive accident reporting.

Meanwhile, a chart compiled by the street traffic engineering bureau of the Los Angeles Police Department showed that Washington ranked fourth among 20 major cities in the number of traffic deaths per 1,000,000 gallons of gasoline consumed annually.

Capital Ranks Fourth.

Approximately five persons are killed each year for every 10,000 motor vehicles registered in the District, it was reported. The Capital also ranks fourth in deaths per square miles, the chart disclosed.

The so-called "Kreml system" stresses use of the "Three E's" of traffic control—engineering, enforcement and education. Within the past two weeks, city authorities have launched a steady campaign of enforcement and motoring education. A marked reduction in accidents, injuries and deaths has resulted.

This campaign, said Maj. Brown, will continue until Washington has established a new record in traffic safety.

Efforts also will be made, it was learned, to obtain Congressional appropriations for much-needed equipment in the police traffic division.

Camp Springs Airport Study Set for Today

House Leaders Order Hearings to Induce King to Release Bill.

House leaders announced last night that a hearing will be held at 10 a. m. today on the King bill to develop a Federal airport at Camp Springs. This action, they said, will be taken in an effort to induce Senator William H. King, of Utah, sponsor of the measure, to permit consideration by a House and Senate conference committee of the May and Copeland bills for the improvement of Washington Airport.

Discussion of the two measures and attempts to agree on a compromise have been thwarted for a week by a Senate motion to reconsider the Copeland bill, which was entered by Senator King on Monday.

On the House side, leaders expressed indignation that the needed authorization to permit improvement of Washington Airport has been further delayed.

Declaring that the "airport people don't owe the city of Washington a thing," Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, said that "action on the bills for the improvement of Washington-Hoover Airport is needed at this time to save lives which are placed in jeopardy every day by the condition of the present terminal."

He was supported in his opinion that improvement of the air terminal is needed immeditaely by Representative Andrew J. May, of Kentucky, who declared that he had conferred with Senator King. He indicated that it was highly doubtful that any action on the Camp Springs measure could be obtained at this session. Washington Airport, he said, is one of the busiest ports in the country, and should be improved immediately.

Senator King declared last night that he hoped to attend the hearing before the House Military Affairs Committee "if possible."

Army of Jobless Again Occupies Monument Park

While United States park and police authorities pondered the problem of housing an estimated 3,500 jobless members of the Workers Alliance of America expected to reach here Monday, an advance guard of 250 slept again last night on improvised beds in the Monument grounds.

Members of the advance delegation spent yesterday lobbying on Capitol Hill for the Schwellenbach-Allen bill providing WPA jobs to all unemployed. Efforts to distribute copies of The Post, containing an advertisement anent the bill, were frustrated by Capitol police. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, meantime canceled all leaves of absence for his men. He said:

"We just believe in being prepared."

Rep. Shannon Asks Pay Boost For House Restaurant Waiters

Assails Low Scale as Compared With Senate; Points to Heavy Fines, Low Tips; Increase Would Be Retroactive to January.

Calling attention to the low wages paid waiters in the House restaurant, Representative Shannon (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday introduced a resolution to raise salaries of House waiters to the scale of those in the Senate restaurant.

He pointed out also that sometimes members or their guests forget to pay their checks, and the waiters, as a result, are fined heavily.

Full-time waiters in the House restaurant, Shannon said, are paid only $35 a month, and half-time waiters get but $20, despite the fact the cafe charges prices comparable with those of high-class hotels.

Wages in the Senate for waiters are $65 and $46. The House head waiter is paid $75, as against $126 for the Senate. Wages of the kitchen men are $35 and $50, respectively.

The waiter's fine for an unpaid check is $2.50, regardless of the amount of the check. Shannon said the accumulated fines often amount to $5 or $10 a month per waiter.

While the waiters receive tips, one of them told a member these rarely amount to $1 a day. This member said he had seen a colleague leave a nickel tip after entertaining a table of constituents.

Shannon's resolution would make the pay raise retroactive to January 4, when Congress convened, and would restore all fines assessed against the waiters. The money would come out of the contingent fund of the House.

Shannon pointed out that it would be difficult this year for the waiters to find employment elsewhere after Congress adjourns, as places at summer resorts have been filled.

William and Alfred, trained by their father, Peter Giacchetti, a graduate of the Milan Conservatory, entered the Marine Band. Under John Philip Sousa, Alfred played the clarinet, and William the drums.

When not on duty with the Marine Band, William Giacchetti played for more than 25 years in the National Theater Orchestra. He was a friend of Victor Herbert, and had played under him many times in Washington.

Mrs. Giacchetti, a native of Baltimore, leaves her daughter, two brothers, Nicholas Wolf and George Wolf, of Norfolk, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Christine Trudewind, Chevy Chase, Md. Funeral services will be held at her home, 917 South Carolina avenue southeast, at 2 p. m. tomorrow, and she will be buried beside her husband in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Giacchetti, who was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., will be buried Saturday in Mount Olivet Cemetery, following services at 8:30 a. m. at his home, 4503 Seventeenth street northeast, and requiem mass at 9 a. m. in St. Paul's Church.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary Goodwin Giacchetti; a daughter, Mrs. Ernestine Harden, also of Washington, and a brother, Fred. He was the oldest living member of the Washington Musicians' Union and was one of its founders.

Mother to Plead For Detained Son

A hearing on the legality of the temporary commitment of a 15-year-old Powell Junior High School pupil to the Industrial Home School for Boys will be held in District Court Wednesday following a complaint by the youth's mother he had not been lawfully sent to the home.

At the request of Attorneys Saul Lichtenberg and Franklin V. Anderson, Justice James M. Proctor issued a rule requiring officers of the Industrial Home to have the boy in court for a hearing.

Car Theft Suspect Captured in West Fled D. C. in 1936

The 20-month-old trail of John J. Gunning, jr., hunted from coast to coast in connection with an auto theft ring, with headquarters here, ended at Los Angeles, Calif., where he was apprehended by Federal agents, Tuesday.

In making the announcement, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said Gunning disappeared January 27, 1936, when summoned to trial on charges of violating the national motor vehicle theft act.

Gashouse Gang Unable to Post $40,000 Bond

8 Held for Grand Jury; Md. Police May Want D.C.'Pants' Robber.

Facing Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court yesterday, eight youthful members of the "Gashouse Gang" were held for the grand jury and placed under $5,000 bond each. They were unable to make the bond and were returned to jail.

Two other members of the group, both 15, will receive Juvenile Court hearings.

Recently detectives, seeking to track down the perpetrators of a petty crime wave, scoured the Northeast and Southeast sections of the city and arrested the suspects. Police believe three other members of the gang remain to be apprehended.

Edward Watts, 19; Joseph Petro, 17; Martin McCarthy, 17, and Peter Riley, 18, were charged with grand larceny of an automobile. McCarthy and Riley pleaded guilty. In another case of automobile theft, Broadus Varney and McCarthy pleaded not guilty.

Charged with the theft of a purse containing a diamond ring and $400 from Miss Marie Tucker, 1901 Wyoming avenue, Gilbert Hardy and Petro pleaded guilty and McCarthy not guilty.

Charles Boyd, 18; Daniel Fitzpatrick, 22; Petro and McCarthy pleaded not guilty in the housebreaking charge, entered by a chain store at 2440 Wisconsin avenue, where a theft of merchandise totaling $30 was reported.

Acting Superintendent Arthur W. Hepburn, of the county force, yesterday conferred with police at No. 9 Precinct, where Louis Johnson, alias Willie Simms, 32, colored, a former convict, is being held on charges of investigation. Washington police are questioning him in connection with a series of seven District robberies.

In nearly every instance, both in Washington and in Hyattsville and College Heights, the robberies have been committed in almost the same way. The burglar enters a home through an unlocked window, steals the pants of his sleeping victim from the bedroom and takes the money from the pockets. The pants usually are found in another part of the house or yard.

More than a score of robberies have been committed recently in the two Prince Georges County towns.

Holdup a Fake To Retain Funds, Two Men Confess

An attempted robbery hoax was admitted yesterday by Lester Jenkins, 22, of Brentwood, Md., and Arthur Scott, 24, of the 600 block of K street northeast, employes of a chain grocery store on Bladensburg road.

In admitting a plan to keep money entrusted to them under the pretense it had been stolen, the young men told Detective Sergt. Robert Barrett and Precinct Detectives D. L. Guest and George E. Thornton they had taken $150 in cash and $70 in checks to a store in the 600 block of A street northeast, where it was later found.

Jenkins in reporting the fake robbery told police he was on his way to the bank with the money when a man held him up and took the funds.

Commissioners Continue Efforts Although Construction Has Begun.

The District Government yesterday served notice on the Adolf Gobel Co. that it will continue its fight to prevent Gobel from building a slaughterhouse on Benning road, although Gobel has already started to work.

A letter from the Commissioners repeated the warning sounded by Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health Service that the abattoir would overload Washington's new sewage plant.

The letter invited Gobel to come forward, "at his convenience," to public hearings to ascertain whether an operating permit would be issued him.

D. Edward Clarke, attorney for the packer, stated last night he had "nothing to fear" from the District, but declined to comment on the suggested hearing until he had received his copy of the letter.

Meanwhile, Elwood Seal, Corporation Counsel, was still investigating the possibility of a tax on the packer based on the amount of offal disposed of in the Anacostia River by the plant. Such a tax is in effect in Chicago. Seal received the suggestion such a tax might be levied from Secretary Ickes.

2 Girl Cousins Critically Hurt In Auto Crash

Marylanders' Car Turns Over; Capital Man Hit by Trolley.

Two girl cousins were critically injured late yesterday afternoon when an automobile in which they were riding overturned near Marshall Hall, Md. The car apparently struck a rut.

The victims were Thelma Willett, 17, of Colmar Manor, Md., and Dorothy Willett, 16, of Brandywine, Md. At Casualty Hospital, where they girls were taken, physicians said Thelma's skull was fractured, and she was injured internally, as well as having a fracture of the frontal bones. Dorothy suffered a fractured jaw and skull.

Driver of the car was Virgil Townshend, 20, of T. B., Md. Townshend was cut and bruised.

Five persons were brought to Casualty Hospital early this morning from a three-way collision on Largo road near Landover, Md. They were Malcolm Lynch, 17, Brentwood, Md.; Irene Johns, 15, James Green, 15, and Marie Oloff, 13, all of Mount Rainier, Md. and Lawrenson Higgins, 29, 1212 Hamilton street northeast.

Police said one car, driven by Harry Kanns, 22, 1029 Tenth street northeast was sideswiped by a second car, which crashed head-on into the third. The three drivers were not seriously hurt.

Paul J. Allen, 27, of 4206 Tenth street northeast, was injured when an automobile he was driving crashed at Thirteenth and Kearney streets northeast into a car operated, police said, by Arthur W. east. Leith was charged with reckeast. Leithe was charged with reckless driving.

$600,000 Is Asked For Navy Hospital

President Roosevelt has recommended to Congress that an appropriation of $600,000 be made available to begin construction on the new $4,850,000 Naval Hospital and Medical Center, it was learned yesterday.

Reports that a site in the vicinity of American University on Massachusetts avenue had been selected, meantime, were denied by Rear Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, Surgeon General of the Navy.

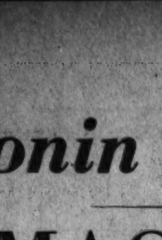
16 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1937 X ****

This Morning

Der Schlager's Back, and Roaring!

By Shirley Povich.

That old seafarer, Max Schmeling, is laying over in New York again. The greatest ocean-going heavyweight the prize ring ever produced today completed his thirty-third crossing of the Atlantic. He didn't check in at Seaman's Snug Harbor, for some reason, but held a press conference at a downtown hotel. His manager, Yussel Jacobs, lit a new cigar for the occasion.



POVICH.

Schmeling has been coming and going now for 10 years. Ever since he burst upon the fistic horizon on the strength of a remarkable facial resemblance to Jack Dempsey the Teuton has been shuttling back and forth between America and Germany after his every fight. Two of his trips he made by air on the ill-fated Hindenburg. When that sea-ship went up in smoke at Lakehurst, Schmeling escaped the holocaust because he had luckily canceled his reservation.

* * *

This morning, at the Essex House, Schmeling was the picture of health and radiance. The man who is no champion despite the fact that he knocked out the man who is champion, was clear-eyed and glowing with his bright sea tan. In his amazingly improved English he talking willingly.

* * * *

"I am ready to fight—but only Joe Louis will I fight. I am here to take back the championship," recited Max with all his native seriousness. "Who else is there for me to fight except Joe Louis?"

* * *

It was suggested that he might take on Jimmy Braddock, or Max Baer or Bob Pastor, but Max did not want to hear of that. "They are like nothing," he said. "I will not trifle any more mit those kind. I am not interested in those kind of fights. I am interested only in the title."

* * *

Schmeling broke into a laugh when told that in a second fight with him, Joe Louis would change his style and make a different kind of fight.

* * *

"Dot is vot Joe Louis says, ho-ho," Max laughed. "But dot is not vot I say. I am not vorried about vot Joe Louis says about how he vill fight me. He vill fight me like I make him fight. Like I did ven I knocked him out. Ve vill fight like I like to fight—not like Joe Louis likes to fight."

* * *

"No, but I read about it. I read about Braddock, cranking up like this—— "and Schmeling wound up as if he were going to throw a punch back in Cherbourg—"And hitting Joe Louis on the chin in the first round. If Braddock can hit him like that—Poof- Then I vill hit him many times and knock him out again."

* * *

Schmeling feels keenly the run-around he has been getting in the last two championship fights which has found him on the outside looking in despite the fact that he knocked Louis out. He would not bother to come back to America if he did not want the title for Germany, he said. He is not interested, he said, in any other fights.

"Even if my fight with Tommy Farr in England went through and I win, I would want to fight Joe Louis," Schmeling was saying. "The International Boxing Federation and the British Board of Control and your N. B. A. would recognize me as the champion if I beat Farr, but I vant to vin the title the good vay—by beating Louis. I do not vant vot you call the moral championship."

* * * *

He said he knew that Joe Lous was anxious to fight him again, but that Louis' managers were not so eager to sign for another Schmeling fight. He realized, he said, their strategy in delaying another match between Louis and himself in the hope that Louis might gain needed experience, while Max would be gathering age rust.

* * * *

"Maybe that is all right. Maybe Louis vill be smarter next year, but they should not depend on me being an old man by that time. I vill keep young. I vill keep young as long as I do not have the title. That will keep me young and ambitious, huh?"

* * * *

Max has no particular interest in the Louis-Farr fight, he was saying. He doubted even that he would visit their training camps unless he was signed to meet the winner by Promoter Mike Jacobs within a few days. He would go to Canada on a hunting trip, probably, he said.

* * *

"Vy should I see them train or fight?" he asked. "I know how they fight. I have seen before—many times. They do not hold any interest for me unless I am fighting them. I know vot to expect ven they fight —Louis will knock him out."

* * * *

What did Schmeling notice about Tommy Farr when he saw him fight in England, a curious reporter wanted to know, and he got a quick answer.

* * * *

"Vot has Farr got, you ask?" repeated Schmeling. "Vell, I tel you. Farr has got 208 pounds—dot's all!"

Nats' Prexy Denies Story In N.Y. Paper

Son-in-Law Is Reported 'Crown Prince' of Griff Empire.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With a snort that almost blew The Post's petite telephone operator off her high-chair, Clark Griffith last night vehemently denied a published report that his son-in-law, Joe Cronin, will succeed him as president of the Washington Baseball Club.

Speaking from Charlotte, N. C., where he is looking over the baseball situation, Griffith hotly branded the story, which emanated from New York as "pure, unadulterated bunk." Stories that the Boston Red Sox pilot, who married Griffith's adopted daughter, Mildred Griffith, three years ago, would return here in an executive capacity, have been heard frequently. This, however, is the first time one ever has been seen in print.

In a New York paper Griffith is quoted as saying:

"Joe has nothing to worry about. No matter what happens in Boston he will wind up with me. Joe is a fine boy, a great executive, and one of the family. He will some day succeed me as president of the Senators."

Apprised of this alleged statement by him, the old gentleman let loose a blast of adjectives that must have uprooted at least a half-mile of telephone poles and bellowed:

"That's bunk. Just plain bunk. Anything you read in those New York papers about the Washington Club just put the Q.T. on and throw out the window."

Griffith did not comment on Bucky Harris' future with the club, nor a statement that Tom Yawkey, Boston owner, would pay-off Cronin, whose contract has two years to run, at the end this season.

Yawkey Explodes Yarn About Cronin.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 18.—Pure piffle and nonsense, Owner Tom Yawkey, of the Red Sox, today labeled a published report that Joe Cronin's contract would be bought up and that Cronin would succeed Clark Griffith as president of the Washington Senators next season.

Yawkey was a visitor in the Washington club's dressing room before the game today when he glanced at an edition of a New York afternoon paper which purported to have first news of the reported transfer of Cronin.

"So that is what it is all about," commented Yawkey. "Eddie Collins (general manager of the Red Sox), phoned me awhile ago that the report about Cronin was out and wanted to know what it was all about. I told him then I knew nothing of it, and I still don't."

The report declared that Clark Griffith, in Washington, had made the remark that Cronin would succeed him as president of the Nats next season and pointed out that there had been constant friction between Manager Cronin and General Manager Eddie Collins at Boston.

On one occasion, it was stated, Collins traded off a Boston ball player without Cronin's consent or knowledge.

Yawkey added that he was wholly satisfied with Cronin's direction of the Red Sox and contemplated no change in managers. Cronin's contract, at $30,000 per season, does not expire until the end of 1939. Cronin, who went to the Red Sox in a $250,000 deal at the end of the 1934 season, married the adopted daughter of Clark Griffith.

Harry March Scores First Upset in District Junior Net With Victory Over Marvin Carlock

Western Champ Bows, 6-4, 6-8, 6-3 in Third Round.

By Bob Garrison.

Harry March, blond North Carolina University student, supplied the first upset victory in the District of Columbia Tennis Association's Junior Tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club yesterday when he sent the championship aspirations of Marvin Carlock, champion of two Western States, in that direction by trouncing him in three sets of stirring tennis, 6—4, 6—8, 6—3.

Playing the best tennis that he has shown here this season, March, although pressed for many points, was an obvious winner after the third set had opened and he had given his No. 2 seeded opponent a 1-0 lead in games. For then Harry opened up with a barrage of placements and aided by his blistering service, he ran up a 4-1 lead in games that was never overcome.

In so doing March advanced into the semifinal round where he will meet Billy Turner for the right to oppose Davie Johnsen, seeded No. 1, in the final round tomorrow at 3 p. m. March and Turner will play today at 2 p. m. Johnsen reached the finals by trouncing Doyle Royal, his schoolmate at Roosevelt High, in two fast sets, 6—1, 6—0, in their semifinal match.

Royal had predicted that he would pull an upset and defeat the "patent-leather kid" for whom he has been gunning all season, and, despite the score, he did give Davie a run for his money by forcing him to fight for each point before succumbing.

Meanwhile play in the girls' tournament reached the final round, while the boys' division was making time awaiting the finals today.

Harriett Williams, of Woodrow Wilson, defeated Hazel (Jimmy) Bishopp, 7—5, 6—2, in what was the best played match of the day, and Charlotte Decker, No. 1 seeded entry, gained the other finalist berth at the expense of Margo Mink, 6—3, 6—1. They are scheduled to meet today immediately following play of the boys' finals.

In the doubles play, the teams of Billy Turner and Harry March reached the semifinals of the junior tournament, and Michael Munez and Doyle Royal gained the other semifinalist berth when they trounced Dewitt Armstrong and Jack Hoyt, 6—2, 6—3. The girls' doubles also progressed into the finals when Hazel Bishopp teamed with Mary Gray to defeat Charlotte Decker and Margaret Duffy, 9—7, 1—6, 6—3. Harriet Gordon and Barbara Christie are scheduled to play Margo Mink and Molly Thompson in their semifinal match this morning for the right to meet the Bishopp-Gray team in the finals this afternoon at 3.

Dusek Faces Coleman on Stadium Mat

Ernie Meets Small But Tough Man in Squat Polish Wrestler.

Abie Coleman, the squat Polish boy who bounces around the ring like a mad ape, will attempt to regain some of his headline prestige tonight at Griffith Stadium in a one-fall-to-a-finish feature wrestling bout with Ernie (The Terrible) Dusek.

Coleman and Dusek are topping the "Ladies Night" card. All feminine fans will be admitted free. The last "Ladies Night" drew close to 1,000 women. All the ladies need is a 25 cents tax ticket to get by the gates.

Coleman has not appeared on a main shot here in quite a while, and his jump from a preliminary to a top role is considered a tribute to Abie's extreme popularity with the goggle-eyed mat fans.

It is not secret that Washington fans like the well known sawed-off shotgun from Warsaw, for Abie seldom puts on a bad act, regardless of how slow—or say how fast—the company may be.

The Coleman-Dusek feud is not exactly a new one. Around two years ago at the old auditorium, pint-sized Abie and roly poly Ernie clashed in the headliner, and fought to a two-hour draw. Neither, Promoter Joe Turner recalled, hardly could stand up, when the referee applied the "brakes."

Abie in a mere preliminary role last Thursday a week ago crushed the French-Roumanian champion, Binitri La Rue.

The semi-windup will find Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher with a penchant for eye gouging, meeting Stanley Pinto, the Bohemian Bomber. Cox stopped Bill Sledge in his last appearance.

Outstanding among the preliminary grapplers is Walter Podolok, the blonde California health instructor, who has been assigned the task of stopping Bobby Roberts, the Dayton battler. Thor Johnson, the massive Westerner, opposes Jim Wright and Mayes McLain, the erstwhile Haskell footballer, goes after Bill Sledge.

Circuit Blow Ends 6-6 Tie for 3d Win

Simmons and Almada Also Hit Four-Ply Wallops and Dickey Gets 24th; Griffs Use 3 Hurlers in Futile Battle

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Yankee Stadium, New York, Aug. 18.—Both teams were saying it with home runs this afternoon, but the Yankees had the last word—in the ninth inning when, with the score tied at 6 to 6, DiMaggio's bat spoke.

It was final.

DiMaggio rammed the fourth home run of the day—the thirty-fifth in his own private catalogue of homers—far, far into the leftfield bleachers and the Yankees beat the Nats, 7-6.

The story of the ball game is the story of today's home runs. Bill Dickey swatted the first one—a clout in to the rightfield bleachers with two pals on base in the first inning to establish the Yanks in a 3-0 lead. Al Simmons nicked a run off the Yankee lead with a smash into the leftfield bleachers in the fourth, and little Mel Almada thumped a homer into rightfield in the eight.

That home run smash of Almada's was standing up as the most important and dramatic clout of the game until DiMaggio happened along. It was a desperate, last-ditch blow by the little Mexican that occurred with two Nats on base and two out in the eight inning and wiped out the Yankees' 6-3 lead.

And then came DiMaggio. Pete Appleton was in there pitching for the Nats—the third Washington pitcher of the day. He had blanked the Yankees in the eighth and he had started the ninth by tossing out Rolfe personally. And he had two strikes on DiMaggio when he pitched the fatal pitch.

"We want a homer, we want a homer," 5,000 kid guests of the Yankees were chanting from the upper deck, as DiMaggio took a new grip on his bat, and that is what he gave 'em. Leftfielder Al Simmons took one look at the well-tagged ball sailing over his head and trotted from the field 'ere it landed in the seats.

The two fat fellows, Ed Linke and Pat Malone started chucking the ball game, but Linke's presence was required no longer than three innings by the Nats. In fact, it was an unhappy choice to begin with, because Linke gave up three Yankee runs before he could get the side out in the first inning.

He walked Crosetti and with one out pitched a single to DiMaggio. And with two out he pitched Bill Dickey's twenty-fourth home run of the season—a ball that wiry Will connected with on the first pitch.

Big Malone wobbled in the third inning but limited the damage to two runs, forcing in one of those. Rick Ferrell singled and Almada's single to right pushed him to third whence he scored on Lewis' long fly to right. Cecil Travis' only single of the day and Rolfe's boot on Stone's grounder filled the bases and Malone walked Kuhel to ease Almada home, but Myer could produce only a meek pop to Crosetti.

Then the Yankees, as if outraged by all of this, went out and got two more runs. Or, rather, Johnny Stone gave 'em two more runs. In fact, if you wanted to be technical about it, you could call Stone the losing catcher in this game, because that is what he was. With Rolfe on base, Stone dropped DiMaggio's line drive for a damaging error, and Gehrig stepped up and scored both of his colleagues with a single to right that put the Yanks ahead, 5 to 3.

Simmons checked in with his homer in the fourth to cut the Yanks' lead to 5 to 3, but against Syd Cohen, who had relieved Linke in the fourth, the Yanks upped their figures to 6 to 3—Powell bashing a three-bagger to right center and Lazzeri scoring him with a double to right.

All of a sudden, the Nats got back into the ball game in the eighth. Things started auspiciously when Myer was hit on the foot by one of Malone's pitches, but the whole idea of tying the ball game slumped when both Simmons and Rick Ferrell flied to Hoag. Walter Millies, though, pinch hitting for Cohen, delivered a single to right, which was the point at which Almada checked in with that timely home run of his.

What happened after that is too painful to be retold.

Miss Laros Is Beaten by Capital Girl

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shawnee on Delaware, Pa. Aug. 18. Helen Dettweiler, Congressional Club, Washington, Maryland State champion, continued to set the pace in the Shawnee Women's Invitation Tournament here today and beat Miss P. Laros, Saucon Valley, Bethlehem, Pa., 8 and 7, in the second round over the Shawnee Country Club course.

Miss Dettweiler has not lost a hole in either of her matches, which places her as the outstanding favorite to win the championship.

Against Miss Laros, she was out in 37 and 5 up. Miss Laros was able to square only three holes, the sixth, seventh and ninth.

Virginia Bascom, of Worcester, Mass., lost a hard match to Mrs. Alice Berry, Poconok, 2 and 1. Miss Bascom had four birdies on the round and was 1 up at the turn. Mrs. Berry squared the match at the twelfth and then went on to win the fifteenth and seventeenth.

Mrs. Wright D. Goss, Newark, N. J., the medalist, who was runner-up in the National Championship in 1926, defeated Mrs. Bishop Hill, Washington, 2 up. Mrs. Hill put up a game fight, but was never able to square after the third hole. Mrs. Goss became 3 up at the turn, and Mrs. Hill won the tenth to become only 2 down. She won the twelfth, fourteenth and seventeenth to become 1 down, and Mrs. Goss won the home hole.

Miss A. Rutherford, Aitemachy, defeated Mrs. Hettleman, New York, 5 and, 4 in the last match. Miss Rutherford was out in 42 and 3 up against Mrs. Hettleman, 48.

Washington women continued to dominate the second flight, Mrs. Landra B. Platt winning by a 9 and 8 margin, while Mrs. Roland MacKenzie was victorious, 8 and 7. They meet tomorrow in the semi-finals.

Navy Yard Softball Clubs Play for Title

The Navy Yard Softball Association has completed the final round of competition. The Miscellaneous was the winner for the first half round and also victor in A Section for the second half. The play-off between Miscellaneous Shop and the West Shop, winner of B Section, will take place on the diamond within the Navy Yard starting today.

Time Out! BY CHET SMITH

Washington Typos Defeat Twin Cities, 7-2; Keep Lead in Tourney

New York Also Wins; Shares Lead

Detroit Eliminated by Chicago; Gotham Nine Beats Cincinnati.

By Jack Munhall.

Washington preserved its unbroken record in the twenty-seventh annual International Union Printer Baseball Turnament yesterday when Heinie Webb, whose feats have been shynonymous with its successes for 20 years, returned to action, coaxed nine excellent innings from his aging right, doled Twin Cities 7 lonely hits and won, 7-2, in a third-round test.

The defeat, its second, dropped Twin Cities from further play. Other teams eliminated yesterday were Detroit, which gamely rallied in the ninth to tie Chicago on a three-run homer by Guntenaar only to bow, 10-9, and Boston, trampled, 13-5, by the hard-hitting Baltimore nine.

St. Louis drew a bye.

Sharing the spotlight with the 42-year-old Webb were mates Phil Boundford, shortstop, who continued his sensational hitting, connecting for two singles in three trips, and George Mosedale, who whammed a triple and a single in five attempts. Incidentally Webb, himself, was not too busy to deliver two singles in four tries.

Washington was off to an early lead. The locals shoved over one in the first and three in the third before Twin Cities could locate the plate in the eighth. Webb, frugal as he was with safeties, was even stingier with gifts and but one foe walked, in the eighth.

New York and Cincinnati staged a real snarling battle. The game started as a pitching duel between Frank Goettke for Cincy and Zaner for the winners. For four innings these two right-handers kept the plate unmarked. Cincy broke the ice in the fifth tallying once and the run appeared increasingly gigantic as the bespectacled Goettke mixed a mystifying curve with a fast one to keep the New Yorkers from the plate.

However, the ultimate winners caught up with him in the late innings scoring twice each in the eighth and ninth and adding one in the ninth.

Cincinnati threatened mildly in the eighth, when one run was counted, but a promising outburst was forestalled when Pinchhitter Stieringer, who incidentally is a pitcher, went down swinging with the bases loaded with forlorn mates.

Chicago, defending champions, had a close call with a desperate Detroit nine fighting to stay in the running. The Motor City boys, facing a discouraging 9-to-6 deficit in the last half of the ninth, gamely fought back to tie the score when Guntenaar blasted an altitudinous homer with the sacks saturated. Chicago, undismayed, tallied in the tenth inning to end the game.

Baltimore returned to its former vigorous stickwork in eliminating Boston. Kappel twirled a nice 5-hit game, while Catcher Wells and Morrisey led a 13-hit attack:

Charles Ficco Sets Pace In Union Printers' Golf.

Charles Ficco continued to set the pace in the local Union Printers' golf event at Indian Spring, being held as an added attraction to the baseball tourney now in progress here, scoring a 77 yesterday and posting a 54 hole total of 237, eight strokes ahead of Fred Stringer, whose 77 left him at 245.

W. C. Henderson was third in the Class A, adding an 80 yesterday for a three round gross of 247. The Class A leaders are all from Washington. Andy Anderson, of Baltimore, was first in Class B with an 85 for a 284 gross, four strokes ahead of W. Griggs, with a 90 yesterday and 288. Bill Hebner, of Baltimore, was 95 for a 292 total.

Russ Alexander is low in Class C with 106-321; V. L. White, of Detroit, next, 106-323, and J. A. Kosaveach third at 110-326.

Wightman Cup Match Teams Are Selected

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—Alice Marble, Helen Jacobs, Mrs. Marjorie Van Ryn, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan were selected today as the United States team for the Wightman Cup matches with Great Britain at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, Long Island, Friday and Saturday.

Miss Marble and Miss Jacobs will play the first and second singles against Great Britain's Kay Stammers and Ruth Hardwick, who were selected as No. 1 and 2 for the British. Mrs. Fabyan will meet Margot Lumb, of the British team, in the third singles.

After a brilliant match today Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Van Ryn were picked as the United States first doubles team. They beat the second due, Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble, 6—4, 6—4. Miss Stammers and Freda James will play the first doubles for Great Britain with Joan Ingram and Evelyn Dearman in the second position.

The draw provides for the No. 1 and 2 singles players on each team meeting the similarly selected players of the opposing nation, although the No. 3 singles players will play but one match, facing each other on the final day.

Friday's play will open at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) with Miss Marble, the United States' No. 1 woman singles player, meeting Miss Hardwick in the opening match. Helen Jacobs plays Miss Stammers in the final singles match of the day. In the lone doubles encounter, Joan Ingram and Evelyn Dearman for Great Britain and Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble, of the United States, the No. 2 teams, will meet.

Miss Hardwick plays Miss Jacobs in the opening match, Saturday. The match will start at 1:15 p. m.

Giants Beat Bees, 9 to 1; 5th Straight

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 18.—Carl Hubbell and his New York Giant mates climbed to within two games of the National League lead today by walloping the Bees, 9 to 1, for their fifth straight victory.

The pitching mastery of the great left hander baffled the Bees with seven hits as his mates clubbed Lou Fette out of the park under a five run barrage in the first inning and coasted in with a 12-hit attack. The win was Hubbell's seventeenth of the year.

Fette, Boston's sensational left-hander, made his debut against the Giants in today's clash, and got only as far as two out before he took a walk to the showers. By that time, the Giants already had the game on ice, and their two other runs in the sixth and two more in the ninth were unnecessary.

HORSE "BUSINESS" SCORED.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—Horse racing cannot be good business unless it remains a good sport, Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the New York State Racing Commission, said today.

Addressing the final session of the National Association of Racing Commissioners, Swope described the sport of kings as a "$150,000,000 national industry," and said that it could "remain in this class only if it is successful as a sport."

Bucs Wallop Cubs, 7 to 6, In Late Rally

Pull Chicago Down to Mere 2 Games Over the Giants.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 18.—The Chicago Cubs' National League lead was cut to two games today when the Pirates came from behind with a 2-run rally in the ninth inning to down the Cubs, 7 to 6. Pep Young's single with the bases loaded sent the winning run across after Gus Suhr's double had tied it up.

The defeat was the fifth straight for the Cubs. Although they sent their ace flinger, Tex Carleton, to the mound in the ninth inning, after they had gone out in front in their half of the final frame with a 2-run rally, they were unable to hold the reviving Pirates.

An error, a sacrifice, Paul Waner's single and Gus Suhr's double accounted for the tying run. Then, with two out and the bases loaded, Young came through in the clutch and broke up the game.

Wheat Tumbles With Decline In Export Need

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Slashing of 100,000,000 bushels from estimated world import needs compared with last year did much today to tumble wheat prices down 2 cents.

With export business in wheat from North America now practically at a standstill, lowest prices of the day were reached just before trading was ended. Adding to bearish sentiment was notice that on account of piling up of domestic stocks of wheat, 500,000 to 1,000,000 bushels will be moved to Montreal from Chicago to make more room here for arrivals.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅝@2 cents under yesterday's finish, September $1.10¾@$1.10⅞, December $1.12⅛@$1.12¼, May $1.14@$1.14¼; Corn, ⅜ off to ⅝ up, September 99¼@99⅜, December 67⅜@67½, May 68⅝@68¾; Oats varying from ⅜ decline to ¼ advance, December 29½, and rye ¾ to 1 cent down, December 78¼. Boston, Aug. 18 (AP).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Buyers for wool manufacturers and top makers made a few inquiries and occasionally bid on wools today. Most offers, however, were below holders' ideas of prices and consequently little business developed.

In Ohio fleeces a few small quantities sold at prices on the low side of quotation ranges generally prevailing last week. Combing medium grades moved at 43 cents in the grease for three-eighths blood and at 42 cents for quarter blood. Some houses rejected bids at these levels.

Steel Activity Turns Upward After Pause

Auto and Replenishment Orders Spur Late Summer Business.

By the Associated Press.

New York, August 18.—An indicated turning point for the better in the volume of new steel business was noted today by Iron Age in its weekly review. The trade publication said that although the improvement was moderate, it extended to all territories. Principal stimulus came from automobile makers and replenishment orders from miscellaneous users who have been drawing on inventories recently. The review said:

"Considerable more tonnage will be required to bridge the gap between shipments and new business. The automobile industry appears to be the key to more pronounced resumption of steel buying for autumn requirements. It was expected that volume steel orders for new models would come earlier than this, but the motor car companies have been delayed in getting into production on 1938 cars. Current output of cars is higher than was ever before reached in the final month of a model year, it being estimated that 375,000 units will be assembled during August, last week's total having risen above 100,000.

"There is no let-up in the pressure for tin plate for can making; farm equipment makers have closed for some of the steel required for machinery to be built for 1938 delivery, while the demand for oil country pipe is holding at a good level. Manufacturers of power shovels and cranes are also very busy and are taking steel in substantial quantities.

"The Shell Petroleum Corporation, St. Louis, has placed an order for 250 miles of 8-inch pipe requiring 15,000 tons of steel."

Retail Advertising Gains Over Year Ago

Chicago, Aug. 18 (AP).—Advertising Age today reported retail display advertising carried by all newspapers in 79 major American cities for the week ended August 7 totaled 17,578,634 lines, a gain of 608,916 over the corresponding week a year ago.

B. F. Goodrich Sales Make Half-Year Peak

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—B. F. Goodrick Co., Akron, Ohio, reported today consolidated net profit for the six months ended June 30 of $4,010,697 after charges, equal after preferred dividends to $1.90 a common share. This compared with $2,727,606 or $1.47 a common share in the first half of last year.

David M. Goodrich, chairman of the board, said that sales in the first half of this year were the highest in the company's 67-year history and showed a gain of approximately 19 per cent over the like 1936 period.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Price Changes Irregularly Lower; Trading Light; U. S. Bonds Yield; Wheat Declines.

New York, Aug. 18.—Lower prices in stocks and commodities and a dull to lower market for Government bonds took place in an uneventful day. Stock turnover of around 700,000 shares was the largest of the week. Price movements were narrow in common issues, but some of the preferreds jumped about on few transactions. Little attention seemed to be given the confirmation of Senator Black to the Supreme Court, as Wall Street had taken that for granted and has become somewhat calloused to such things. September wheat fell 1¾ cents to $1.10⅞ a bushel.

These dull days seem to give point to the criticisms of President Gay of the Stock Exchange on what he considers the excess of regulations and restrictions which he thinks are helping to destroy the liquidity of the markets. President Gay is not only doubtful of the ultimate value of the SEC controls, but he suggests also that the high margin requirements put into force by the Federal Reserve Board are helping to take from the markets that which is their main excuse for existence, namely, a ready exchange of securities at fair prices.

Difficult Appraisal.

This is perhaps, as good a time as any, in the words of President Gay, "to assess losses against gains." Some of the gains President Gay admits; he raises the question of whether the multifarious regulations have not done much to create thin markets for securities, to drive trading to foreign markets and to the over the counter dealers, to widen spreads between bid and asked prices, and to destroy the usefulness of the securities markets in general.

The trouble is that it is difficult indeed to discover the limits of responsibility for solidification of the markets. No one would put all the blame on the SEC, nor on the Federal Reserve Board, with its high margin requirements. The general uncertainty of business, the high taxes on capital gains, and numerous other factors contribute to the thinness of the markets. No doubt the markets now would be more active were there no more regulation than that which existed ten years ago, but whether that would help any but the professional manipulators is a question.

Sins of the Few.

President Gay is right in saying that burdens are placed on the many in order to discipline the few, but that doesn't tell the whole story. The stock exchange was altogether too free and easy before the SEC came into existence, although markets in 1930-32, without much regulation, seemed to be even less liquid than they are at present. It is always true that honest men suffer for the misconduct of dishonest men, but when the honest men are in the majority, as is the case with the stock exchange membership, the fault lies with the honest men as well as with an outside regulatory force.

The stock exchange has had it within its power to govern the use of credit by its members, manipulation of markets and other practices which the Federal Reserve Board and the SEC have been empowered to police. One reason for the excess of regulation may be the seeming unwillingness of the stock exchange membership to assume those burdens.

Letting George Do It.

The Meehan case is one in point. In 20 minutes or less that affair could have been settled to the satisfaction of every one by the proper stock exchange committee. Instead it has dragged through long months of inquiry, testimony, accusation, criticism and finally has impressed the financial community less with the power and good intentions of the SEC than with the fact that it is difficult to guess what is likely to happen or to know how far anyone can go in the purchase and sale of stocks.

Only a few months ago President Gay feared that the excited market, with large public trading in low-priced shares, was dangerous; and it has not been a long time since he asserted that responsibility for any inflationary boom in the stock market would lie with the Federal Reserve Board in charge of credit. It would be difficult and unwise for the board to jack up and down its margin requirements with the rise and fall of stock trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange. Whether for good or evil, the immediate future seems to promise more rather than less regulation of the securities markets.

Trade Prospects.

Trade news was a shade more cheerful. The Iron Age noted "a turning point for the better in the volume of new steel business." Another rise in steel scrap prices was reported from Pittsburgh. Railroad freight car loadings last week were slightly larger than those of the preceding week, according to early estimates, and ran about 5 per cent ahead of a year ago. The industrial picture suggests that, while business has fallen from earlier high points, it has a good chance of going ahead this autumn.

A fairly firm tone was evident in some parts of the industrial share list. Railroad stocks did fairly well at the start, although the gross revenues of the leading lines, as reported by the I. C. C., were less than 3 per cent higher in July than for the same month last year. Two large roads that already have reported net income for the last month show declines. It is altogether probable that net railway operating income for the roads as a while will show a small decrease from the total of last year's similar period. That may help the railroads in wage negotiations, but in case higher wages have to be paid it will not reassume security holders.

Spending Invisible Wealth.

No great repatriation is likely until it is certain that the franc has reached the limit of its depreciation and that the period of huge deficit spending by the Government is over. Some observers held the view that the franc will have to give way again to relieve the intolerable burden of the public debt. That won't cure the disease caused by spending more than is available. Our Govrenment has been trying to redistribute such wealth as it could lay its hands on; the socialist government in France has gone further and is trying to redistribute the wealth first and find it afterward.

Famous Last Words.

"President Roosevelt's last words to me when I was leaving Washington were: 'Whatever else you do, balance your budget.'" So said the French Premier, M. Bonnet, in a recent speech at Perigueux. Perhaps the President was merely talking through his bonnet.

Sears Roebuck Sales Set All-Time Peak

Chicago, Aug. 18 (U.P.).—Sears, Roebuck & Co. reported today sales for the seventh period of the fiscal year, July 17 to August 13, totaled $36,266,551, an increase of 7.4 per cent compared with the corresponding period last year. This was a new all-time record.

Sales for the first seven periods from January 30 to August 13 totaled $291,648,636, an increase of 16.1 per cent compared with the corresponding period in 1936. This also was a new record.

Am. Tel. & Tel. Votes Regular $2.25 Dividend

Higher and Extra Payments Are Declared by Other Corporations.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 18.—Directors of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared today the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share on the capital stock, payable October 15 to holders of record September 15. The dividend means distribution of about $42,000,000 to more than 600,000 shareholders.

American I. G. Chemical.

American I. G. Chemical Corp. announced an interim dividend of $3 on class "A" common stock and a payment of 30 cents on class "B" common, both payable September 15 to stock of record September 10. Previous payments in December were 50 cents extra and $2 annual on class "A" and 5 cents extra and 20 cents annual on class "B."

El Paso Natural Gas.

Directors of El Paso Natural Gas Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents today on the common stock. This is an increase of 10 cents over the 40 cents paid in July. The latest declaration is payable October 1 to holders of record September 20.

Automobile Finance.

Automobile Finance Co. of Pittsburgh declared an extra dividend of 5 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 10 cents on the common stock payable September 15 to holders of record August 31. Previous payment of 10 cents extra was made July 15.

Beechnut Packing.

Beechnut Packing Co. declared an extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of $1 on the common stock, both payable October 1 to stock of record September 11. Three months ago a like extra was voted.

Maryland Fund.

Maryland Fund, Inc., investment company, announced an extra distribution of 2½ cents a share in addition to the regular 5 cents, both payable September 15 to holders of record August 31. In June the company paid 3 per cent in stock and the regular 5 cents in cash.

Express Traffic Up 6.6% Over Year Ago

New York, Aug 18.—Express traffic a barometer of business conditions, scored a gain of 6.66 per cent in June, compared with the same month last year, according to K. N. Merritt, general sales manager of the Railway Express Agency, New York.

The business of the company for the month was 11,210,741 shipments, an increase of 700,367.

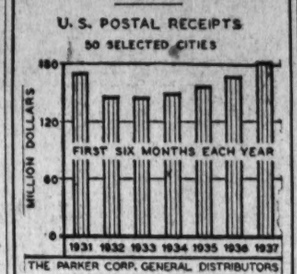
Postal Receipts Set Seven-Year Record



Boston, Mass., Aug. 18.—Postal receipts during the first six months of this year topped the same 1936 months by nearly 9 per cent and were the largest first-half-year receipts since 1930. For 35 consecutive months postal receipts have exceeded the corresponding month of the previous year.

Curb Prices Dip; Trading Increases

New York, Aug. 18 (AP).—The curb market tended to slightly lower levels in quickened trading today. Losses of from fractions to around 2 points were recorded on the downside, while gains, which were scattered, were confined to minor fractions. Aluminum Co. dropped 2 points to 154 and Tech-Hughes gave up 1⅝ to 30. American Cyanamid "B" and Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. were losers.

The oils were the hardest hit in spite of recent reports of record crude oil output and gasoline demand. Creole Petroleum ended at 37, off 1⅜, and Gulf Oil broke 1⅛ to 58. International Petroleum and Sunray Oil were fractionally lower.

Utility stocks were also depressed. Northern States Power "A" slumped 1¾ to 22¼ and Electric Bond & Share lost ½ to 18½. Lower were Pennroad and Montgomery Ward "A" while Sherwin Williams, United Wall Paper and American Superpower were unchanged.

F. M. Barden, Analyst, Resigns from SEC

The resignation of Frederick M. Barden, associate security analyst in the registration division of the Securities and Exchange Commission, was announced yesterday by the commission. Mr. Barden will leave the commission on September 9 to become secretary of the Pennsylvania Securities Commission, at Harrisburg.

He became associated with the Securities and Exchange Commission in March 1935, prior to which time he was with Scudder, Stevens & Clark, investment counsel in Philadelphia.

U. S. Incomes Increase 20% In Half Year

But Trend Has Been Downward Since 6-Billion Peak in March.

New York, Aug. 18.—The national income produced in the United States declined in June for the third successive month, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. It amounted to $5,890,000,000 as compared with $6,017,000,000 in May and with $6,065,000,000 at the 1937 peak in March. At the same time, it was 13.6 per cent larger than in June last year when the income amounted to $5,185,000,000. This gain over 1936, however, was the smallest for any month this year, having declined steadily from 28.2 per cent increase in March.

It is possible that when the returns for July are available, they will show a reversal of the recent downward trend in the national income. It is apparent, however, that if any recovery occurred in July, it was relatively small. At any rate, it is probable that the national income in July was still running above last year's level, thus providing further support to the belief that the annual income in 1937 will be larger than in 1936 despite the evidence that conditions will not be as favorable during the remaining months as in the early part of this year.

It is questionable whether any slump before the close of 1937 will be severe enough to offset the good gain during the first half when the national income was 20.3 per cent ahead of a year ago, rising from $29,300,000,000 to $35,245,000,000.

Farm Exports Drop $30,000,000 in Year

By the Associated Press.

A decline of more than $30,000,000 appeared today in the value of farm exports for the 1937 fiscal year, as compared with the year previous. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said yesterday that shipments of farm products for the year ended June 30 were valued at $732,839,000 against $766,548,000 the previous year.

Volume of exports for 1936-1937 was 55 per cent of pre-war levels (1909-1914) compared with 60 per cent a year earlier. The bureau said the value decline was 4 per cent and the volume decrease, 8 per cent. The volume of exports in June, final month of the fiscal year, dropped to 46 per cent of pre-war levels. Only wheat and flour showed gains over Junes of recent year.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Far Eastern currencies continued to rise against the dollar in foreign exchange dealings yesterday. The Japanese yen, Shanghai dollar and Hongkong dollar were quoted at new high levels for the year.

The Shanghai dollar climbed .15 of a cent to 30.40 cents. Traders said this was an arbitrary rate, necessitated by cessation of financial activity in Shanghai.

The Hongkong dollar gained .22 of a cent to 31.29 cents, largely on transfer of Shanghai funds to Hongkong, traders added. The forward move in the yen of .04 of a cent to 29.12 cents accompanied a slight advance in sterling, to which the yen is pegged.

The British pound moved up ⅛ of a cent to $4.99¼. The French franc gained .00⅛ of a cent at 3.75½ cents. The discount on 90-day forward francs widened to .11 of a cent below spot quotations. The Hollan guilder climbed .03 to 55.18 cents.

Manteo, Roanoke Island, N. C., Aug. 18 (AP).—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's address today at the celebration of the 350th anniversary of Virginia Dare's birth.

"Until recent years history was taught as a series of facts and dates. Today we are beginning to look more closely into the events which preceded those great social and economic and political changes which have deeply affected the known history of the world.

"For example, most of us older people learned of Columbus' voyages, of how America came to be named—and we jumped from there in our North American history to the founding of Jamestown and of Plymouth—1492 to 1607 with mere passing reference to Roanoke and perhaps to the voyage of Verazzano.

"It has always been a pet theory of mine that many other voyages of exploration and of trade took place in that century along our American shores. We know that during the same period the Spaniards established great colonies throughout the West Indies, at Panama and other points in Central America, and extended their cities, their religious institutions and even their universities to both the East and West coasts of South America. It is unbelievable that white men did not come scores of times to what is today the Atlantic seaboard of the United States. Some day perhaps a closer search of the records of the seafaring towns of Britain and France and Flanders and Holland and Scandinavia will rediscover discoverers. Perhaps even it is not too much to hope that documents in the old country and excavations in the new may throw some further light, however dim, on the fate of the 'lost colony' and Roanoke and Virginia Dare.

Era of Restless Action.

"If we are to understand the full significance of the early explorations and the early settlements, if we are to understand the kind of world upon which Virginia Dare opened her eyes on that far-away August day in 1587, we must ask why western Europe came to the New World.

"It was in part because the era was an era of restless action. Under the Renaissance men experienced great awakenings—they were fired with restless energy to burst the narrow bounds of the medieval conception of the universe—to fare forth on voyages of exploration and conquest.

"Many of those who sailed in immense discomfort, in tiny ships, across the Atlantic, were adventurers—some of them seeking riches, some seeking fame, some impelled by the mere spirit of unrest. But most of them—the men, the women and the children, came hither seeking something very different—seeking an opportunity which they could not find in their homes of the Old World.

"We hear of the gentlemen of title, who, on occasion, came to the colonies, and we hear of the gentlemen of wealth who helped to fit out the expeditions. But it is a simple fact which cannot too often be stressed that an overwhelming majority of those who came to the colonies from England and Scotland and Ireland and Wales and France and Holland and Sweden belonged to what our British cousins would, even today, call 'the lower middle classes.' The opportunity they sought was something they did not have at home—opportunity freely to exercise their own chosen form of religion, opportunity to get into an environment where there were no classes, opportunity to escape from a system which still contained most of the elements of feudalism.

Courage Praised.

"This is not in derogation of those pioneers. It is rather in praise of them. They had the courage, physically and mentally, by deed and word, to seek better things, to try to capture ideals and hopes forbidden to them by the laws and rules of their own home lands.

"It is well, too, that we bear in mind that in all the pioneer settlements democracy and not feudalism was the rule. The men had to take their turn standing guard at the stockade raised against the Indians. The women had to take their turn husking corn stored for the winter supply of the community. Rules of conduct had to be established to keep private greed or personal misconduct in check. I fear very much that if certain modern Americans, who protest loudly their devotion to American ideals, were suddenly to be given a comprehensive view of the earliest American colonists and their methods of life and government, they would promptly label them Socialists. They would forget that in these pioneer settlements were all the germs of the later American Constitution.

"They would forget, too, that although in the days that intervened between Roanoke and Jamestown and Plymouth, and the time of the American Revolution itself, practical democracy was carried on in the lives of the inhabitants of nearly every community in the 13 colonies. It is true that as commerce developed in the seaboard cities, and as a few great landed estates were set up here and there, a school of thought parallel with the same school of thought in England made great headway.

Many Wanted a King.

"It was this policy which came into the open in the Constitutional Convention of 1787; for in that convention there were some who wanted a king, there were some who wanted to create titles, and there were many, like Alexander Hamilton, who sincerely believed that suffrage and the right to hold office should be confined to persons of property and persons of education. We know, however, that although this school persisted, with the assistance of the newspapers of the day, during the first three National Administrations, it was eliminated for many years at least under the leadership of President Thomas Jefferson and his successors. His was the first great battle for the preservation of democracy. His was the first great victory for democracy.

"In the half-century that followed there was constant war between those who, like Andrew Jackson, believed in a democracy conducted by and for a complete cross-section of the population, and those who, like the directors of the Bank of the United States and their friends in the United States Senate, believed in the conduct of Government by a self-perpetuating group at the top of the ladder. That this was the clear line of demarcation—the fundamental difference of opinion in regard to American institutions is proved by an amazingly interesting letter which Lord Macaulay wrote in 1857 to an American friend.

"This friend of his had written a book about Thomas Jefferson. Macauley said 'you are surprised to learn that I have not a high opinion of Mr. Jefferson, and I am surprised at your surprise. I am certain that I never wrote a line and that I have never . . . uttered a word indicating an opinion that the supreme authority in a State ought to be entrusted to the majority of citizens told by the head; in other words, to the poorest and most ignorant part of society.' Macaulay, in other words, was opposed to what we call 'popular government.'

Saw Democracy Ending Liberty.

"He went on to say, 'I have long been convinced that institutions purely democratic must, sooner or later, destroy liberty, or civilization, or both.'

"Then, speaking of England, he says, 'I have not the smallest doubt that, if we had a purely democratic government here, the effect would be the same . . . you may think that your country (speaking of America), enjoys an exception from these evils . . . I am of a very different opinion. Your fate I believe to be certain, though it is deferred by a physical cause. As long as you have a boundless extent of fertile and unoccupied land, your laboring population will be far more at ease than the laboring population of the Old World, and while that is the case, the Jeffersonian policy may continue to exist without causing any fatal calamity. But the time will come when New England will be as thickly peopled as old England. Wages will be as low and will fluctuate as much with you as with us. You will have your Manchesters and Birminghams, and in those Manchesters and Birminghams hundreds of thousands of artisans will assuredly be sometimes out of work. Then your institutions will be fairly brought to the test. Distress everywhere makes the laborer mutinous and discontented, and inclines him to listen with eagerness to agitators who tell him that it is a monstrous inquity that one man should have a million while another cannot get a full meal.'

"And then Macauley goes on to tell his American friend how they handled such situations in England. He says, 'In bad years there is plenty of grumbling here and sometimes a little rioting, but it matters little. For here the sufferers are not the rulers. The supreme power is in the hands of a class, numerous indeed, but select . . . an educated class . . . a class which is, and knows itself to be, deeply interested in the security of property and the maintenance of order. Accordingly the malcontents are firmly yet gently restrained. The bad time got over without robbing the wealthy to relieve the indigent. The springs of national prosperity soon begin to flow again . . . and all is tranquillity and cheerfulness.

Like Chamber of Commerce.

"Almost, methinks, I am reading not from Macaulay but from a resolution of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Liberty League, the National Association of Manufacturers or the editorials written at the behest of some well-known newspaper proprietors.

"Like these gentlemen of 1937, Macaulay in 1857 painted this gloomy picture of the future of the United States—I cannot help foreboding the worst. 'It is quite plain that your Government will never be able to restrain a distressed and discontented majority . . . the day will come when . . . a multitude of people, none of whom has had more than half a breakfast or expects to have more than half a dinner, will choose a legislature . . . on one side is a statesman preaching patience, respect for vested rights . . . on the other is a demagogue ranting about the tyranny of capitalists . . . and asking why anybody should be permitted to drink champagne and to ride in a carriage while thousands of honest folks are in want of necessaries . . . I seriously apprehend that you will, in some such season of adversity . . . do things which will prevent prosperity from returning; that you will act like people who should in a year of scarcity devour all the seed corn and thus make the next year, not of scarcity, but of absolute famine . . . there is nothing to stop you. Your Constitution is all sail and no anchor . . . either some Caesar or Napoleon will seize the reins of Government with a strong hand, or your republic will be . . . laid waste by barbarians in the Twentieth Century as the Roman Empire was in the fifth.'

Just Another Alarmist.

"That, my friends, with all due respect to Lord Macaulay, is an excellent representation of the cries of alarm which rise today from the throats of American Lord Macauleys. They tell you that America drifts toward the Scylla of dictatorship on the one hand, or the Charybdis of anarchy on the other. Their anchor for the salvation of the ship of state is Macaulay's anchor: Supreme power . . . in the hands of a class, numerous indeed, but select; of an educated class, of a class which is, and knows itself to be, deeply interested in the security of property and the maintenance of order.

"Mine is a different anchor. They do not believe in democracy—I do. My anchor is democracy—and more democracy. And, my friends, I am of the firm belief that the Nation, by an overwhelming majority, supports my opposition to the vesting of supreme power in the hands of any class, numerous but select.

"It is of interest to read Macaulay's letter with care—for I find in it no reference to the improving of the living conditions of the poor, to the encouragement of better homes or greater wages, or steadier work. I find no reference to the averting of panics, no words for the encouragement of the farmer—nothing at all, in fact, except the suggestion that malcontents are firmly but gently restrained . . . in the interest of the security of property and the maintenance of order.

Assails "Tory Salvation."

"I conceive it to be true that I am just as strongly in favor of the security of property and the maintenance of order as Lord Macauley, or as the American Lord Macaulays who thunder today. And in this the American people are with me, too. But we cannot go along with the Tory insistence that salvation lies in the vesting power in the hands of a select class, and that if America does not come to that system America will perish.

"Macaulay condemned the American scheme of Government based on popular majority. In this country 80 years later his successors do not yet dare openly to condemn the American form of Government by popular majority, for they profess adherence to the form, while at the same time their every act shows their opposition to the very fundamentals of democracy. They love to intone praise of liberty, to mouth phrases about the sanctity of our Constitution—but in their hearts they distrust majority rule because an enlightened majority will not tolerate the abuses which a privileged minority would seek to foist upon the people as a whole.

"Since the determination of this minority is to substitute their will for that of the majority would it not be more honest for them, instead of using the Constitution as a cloak to hide their real designs, to come out frankly and say: 'We agree with Macaulay that the American form of Government will lead to disaster and therefore we seek a change in the American form of Government as laid down by the founding fathers?'

"They seek to substitute their own will for that of the majority, for they would serve their own interest above the general welfare. They reject the principle of the greater good for the greater number, which is the cornerstone of democratic government.

Poorest Not Most Ignorant.

"Under democratic government the poorest are no longer necessarily the most ignorant part of society. I agree with the saying of one of our famous statesmen who devoted himself to the principle of majority rule: 'I respect the aristocracy of learning; I deplore the plutocracy of wealth; but thank God for the democracy of the heart.'

"I seek no change in the form of American Government. Majority rule must be preserved as the safeguard of both liberty and civilization.

"Under it property can be secure; under it abuses can end; under it order can be maintained—and all of this for the simple, cogent reason that to the average of our citizenship can be brought a life of greater opportunity, of greater security, of greater happiness.

"Those worthy hopes led the father and mother of Virginia Dare and the fathers and mothers from many nations through many centuries to seek new life in the New World. Pioneering it was called in the olden days; pioneering it still is—pioneering for the preservation of our fundamental institutions against the ceaseless attack of those who have no faith in democracy. Fortitude and courage of those who planted a colony on this island in the days of Good Queen Bess."

Auction Sales

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1937—
THOS. J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers, 1431 Eye Street Northwest.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE THREE-STORY BRICK DWELLING CONTAINING TWELVE ROOMS, TWO BATHS, HOT-WATER HEAT, KNOWN AS PREMISES 1826 17TH STREET, NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust duly recorded, in Liber No. 6790, Folio 121 et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will sell, at public auction, in front of the premises, on WEDNESDAY, THE TWENTY-FIFTH DAY OF AUGUST, A. D. 1937, AT TWO FORTY-FIVE O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and designated as and being lot 95 in Luther G. Billing's subdivision of Original lot 21 in Square 152, as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 14 at folio 177; subject to the right of redemption by the maker of the aforesaid deed of trust, her heirs or assigns, within a period of sixty days from date of sale, not excluding Sundays or holidays, as provided in said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years, with interest at five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 will be required at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise the trustees reserve the right to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

Bob Burns Says—

I never could understand why family ties ain't as strong in the city as they are in the country. It's like the time down home when Uncle Hod was out fishin' with Grandpaw Snelson. They were sittin' on the bank, just pullin' the fish in, one after the other, when they looked up and saw the game warden comin'. Uncle Hod jumped up and started to run with the game warden at his heels. After they'd beeen runnin' about 5 miles, the game warden caught up with Uncle Hod and says, "Show me your fishin' license;" Uncle Hod took his license out and the game warden looked at it and said, "Well, what in the world were you runnin' for? You've got a license!" and Uncle Hod says, "Yes, but I was runnin' to give grandpaw a chance to get away—he ain't got none!"

THE CHIEF WAS ALL WRONG, SUSPECTING HER—SHE'S OKAY—I CAN READ HER LIKE A BOOK!
I FEEL MEAN TRYING TO TRAP TOMMY, WHEN HE IS SO KIND TO ME—
BUT I HAVE TO KNOW—HM—HERE'S A SAMPLE OF THE COUNTERFEIT MONEY—BUT TOMMY'S MONEY DOESN'T MATCH IT—
I'M GLAD THAT LETS HIM OUT!

LALA PALOOZA — Vincent Gets His Picture Taken— And How! Sunday. — By Rube Goldberg

WHAT'S THAT, A POT BOILIN' OVER THERE, VINCE?
AN' IT DON'T LOOK LIKE NO GHOST FOOD NEITHER
SNIF SPLUSH

MICKEY FINN — Uncle Phil's Clambake Is a Laugh Festival, Sunday. — By Lank Leonard

TOM'S QUICK THINKING HAS SAVED MICKEY AND "TRUCK"—HE, ALONE, SAW THAT A ROPE THROWN OVER THE ELECTRIC WIRES WOULD ENABLE THEM TO SWING TO SAFETY!
B-BUT DOCTOR—I BETTER GO HOME—SOMEBODY MAY'VE TOLD MA—AND SHE'LL BE WORRIED!
YOU'RE GOING TO THE HOSPITAL ALONG WITH MACKAY—FOR OBSERVATION!
I THINK THAT LADY YOU SAVED WANTS TO THANK YOU BEFORE YOU GO, MICKEY!
GEE—AIN'T THEY CUTE!
WHATTA GUY!

DIXIE DUGAN — Join in the Fun With Freddie and Imogene, Sunday. — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

T-TAKE 'IM AWAY—TAKE 'IM AWAY.
IS IT A MAD DOG?—IT'S FOAMING AT THE MOUTH—POLICE ARE RUSHING TOWARD THE RING WITH GUNS DRAWN—HOPE HE DOESN'T COME THIS WAY—B-R-R-R-
FER GRACIOUS SAKES—WHAT ARE YOUBE DOIN' HERE?
PALOOKA GRABBED HIM BY THE TAIL AS HE RUSHED TOWARD DILL—HE'S BRAVE TO DO THAT—THE BELL JUST RANG—
DON'T WORRY NOBUDDY, IT'S MY DOG! HE THO'T MR. DILL WAS A ENEMY.
LISTEN, PALOOKA IS EXPLAINING TO THE RING FULL OF PEOPLE THAT IT'S HIS DOG—WELL HOW DID HE GET IN HERE?—MUST HAVE FOLLOWED JOE
SO IT'S YOUR MUTT EH—? AN' HE MIGHTHA TORE ME LEG OFF.
I HOPE YOUSE'LL ESCUSE 'IM—HE DINT KNOW THIS WAS A PRIZE FIGHT. SMOKEY'LL TAKE 'IM OUT.
JOE IS HANDING THE DOG TO SMOKEY NOW—THE REST PERIOD IS ALMOST OVER—THE POLICE AND HANDLERS ARE LEAVING THE RING—THERE'S THE BELL—

APPLE MARY AND DENNIE — See How Apple Mary Outwits a Grouchy Farmer, Sunday. — By Martha Orr

I WAS SO EXCITED THIS MORNING, I FORGOT TO DO IT. NOW, WHAT'S THE NAME OF THE PLACE WHERE JIM LIVES? COLORED STONES—OR SOMETHING—
RED ROCK, GRANMA.
YOU WATCH THE MAP, DENNIE! KEEP US ON THE RIGHT ROAD.
GOSH, IF I DO TELL YOU WHICH ROAD TO TAKE, CAN YOU KEEP US ON IT?

BENNY — Unfair to Labor. — By J. Carver Pusey
